

Inside:

News	1,8
Editorials	2
Sports	3,4
Entertainment	6,7

UNCA Sports: Double Header
Saturday with rival Mars Hill. Women play at 6:00. Mens game immediately following in Justice Gym.

Weather: Rain ending Thursday with lows in the 20's through Friday. Partly cloudy Saturday through Monday high in the 40's low in mid 30's.

Kaleidoscope

Serving The Students Of The University of North Carolina at Asheville since 1982

Volume 4, Number 1

Thursday, January 19, 1984

Cagle announces '84 SG activities

Campus organizations getting computer

By Anna Paulette Witt

"A new Dec-Mate II computer processor for student use only is being installed in the Student Government Association secretary's office early in February," says SGA President Ken Cagle.

However, the terminal is for recognized UNCA student clubs' and organizations' use, not for the general student population, he said.

Cagle outlined the steps involved in qualifying to use the Dec-Mate:

A representative of each club or organization must come by the SGA secretary's office and do two things before gaining access to the Dec-Mate.

First, they must sign an agreement between the organization and the Student Government in which they promise to abide by the computer-use policies.

Second, they must sign-up for and complete a Dec-Mate training seminar to be taught by students Doug Miller and Carole Bradley.

Cagle suggested that those interested in using the Student Center Dec-Mate might also wish to purchase and study An Introduction to Word Processing Using the Dec-Mate System which is available in the Campus Bookstore for $8.

"The SGA has an active schedule planned for the Spring '84 semester," says Cagle.

Among the upcoming events is this weekend's University of North Carolina Association of Student Government's monthly meeting being held for the first time at UNCA.

"All the SGA presidents from the other 15 universities in the system will be on campus, along with other student leaders from these campuses," says Cagle who is president of the UNCASG.

They will meet from 9 a.m. to 2:30 p.m. both Saturday and Sunday in the Student Center private dining room, says Cagle.

Among the topics on their agenda are:

- . A common date for SG elections.
- . The recently upgraded UNC freshman entrance requirements.

. An inter-campus newspaper and radio station hotline.

Cagle says the meetings are open to all.

Other new UNCA SGA developments include:

. The establishment of an SGA Judicial Board through which students will participate in handling campus disciplinary problems.

. The establishment of an SGA Legal Services. Students seeking legal advice may have an initial visit with an attorney for $15 by contacting one of the lawyers listed with the SGA. Call or come by the SGA office for

Continued on page 8

Campus lighting, food, SGA

Iovacchini speaks out on student concerns

By Anna Wilson

An aspect of campus life that has been receiving many complaints lately is the lack of adequate lighting on campus.

"The one area most students are concerned about is the Quad," the area between the library and the administration building, said Dr. Eric Iovacchini, vice chancellor for student affairs.

One explanation for the lack of lights there is that "the trees planted several years ago have now grown so much that they block out the lights," said Iovacchini.

"We are working on alternatives because I have mixed feelings about cutting down trees, especially at one of the more beautiful places around campus."

"One thing we have thought about is maybe mounting some lights on the science building," he said.

I would like to know from students where the problem areas are."

Another concern Iovacchini hears about is the quality of food in the UNCA cafeteria.

"Believe it or not, food services at some schools are worse than the one here at UNCA,"

Continued on page 8

"Darkness falls from the wings of night": And at UNCA it may trip the unsuspecting pedestrian student or bewilder the searching stranger. Here the lack of illumination in front of the Zageir Social Science Building contrasts with the brightness of the parking lot beyond.

Photo by Pam Walker