(THE POOR MAN'S CAMPUS CRIER)

Scholastic Screamer

STRIKES BACK!

Volume whatever-it-was-last-time Asheville, North Carolina Number-same-plus-1.

HERE WE GO AGAIN!

Recognizing true genius and talent when they see it, the editor and staff of the Crier (remember it? that paper the journalism class used to print) have let Uncle Germ McHone take over for a whole issue again. This shows that they're all unselfish, kindhearted, and great sports. (And mainly they get another week to rest while I do all the work.) This is positively the last time I'll do it, so if you're reading this copy over someone's shoulder, or have borrowed one from somebody who bought it, I have a message for you...SHELL OUT, YOU CHEAPSKATE! These things will be collector's items some day, and surely it's worth a few little ol' pennies to own a collector's item. How can we pay our fantastic debts with compliments from people who read but do not buy? Be a sport about it, help send me through college. (In the front door and out the back, guided tour, three dollars.)

POETRY-DEATH'S DOOR-

The recent rainy weather (which a few of us thought was the Second Flood) put me in a negative, deathly mood, which brought to mind the following two poems:

I. FREED-

"Kill! Smash, grind, and destroy!

Slay the evil White Man who has kept us in bondage so long!

That was the one thought in the mad, hate-filled minds of the freed slaves who swarmed through the streets, insanely destroying the Whites in an anger so fierce none of them knew later which one of them had attacked and strangled President Lincoln.

II. THE SKELETON DIED OF MALNUTRITION-the skeleton died of malnutrition and when they held his funeral all remarked on how good he looked so deathlike in his coffin, smiling up at them from two hollow eyes in which crawled two well-fed grave worms.

RESULTS OF LAST WEEK'S CONTEST-

In the Screamer's big ten-prize contest last issue, which demanded that you be absent from assembly to win, no one showed up on the assigned Thursday during chapel time. All the sophomores were taking those silly little tests, and the rest of you either hadn't read the paper or just didn't care. In the absence of anyone to give the prizes to, I did the only honorable thing...I donated them all to myself!

LACK OF KNOWLEDGE QUIZ-

For all you soph's 'n'sots who had achievement tests recently, and for those who feel left out because they didn't get to take them, here's a short, extremely easy test. Questions count ten points each, rate yourself on a percentage basis.

- (1) Do you understand Einstein's theory of reincarnation, homogenization, and life?
- (2) True or false? (Choose one.)
- (3) Match the following lettered names to the numbered names:

A. Robert	1. E. Lee
B. Robert	2. Frost
C. Robert	3. Horton
D. Robert	4. L. Stevenson
E. John	5. L. Lewis
F. John	6. the Baptist
G. John	7. Paul Jones
H. John	8. Henry
- (4) Fill in: _____ was the main cause of _____ in _____ history.
- (5) What young starlet was seen with what producer at which club, at what hour?
- (6) Are you now or have you ever been?
- (7) Make 10 different words from the letters in the word ZORRO.
- (8) The King belongs to the Board of Lords, the Board of Royalty, and the Board of Musician's Local 502. The Queen is a member of the Board of Ladies, Board of Stupidity, and the Board of Broads. What, then, is their son, Prince Melvin?
- (9) If $2\frac{1}{2}$ men can build $6\frac{1}{2}$ houses in $2\frac{1}{2}$ hours, and $10\frac{1}{2}$ men can tear down $5\frac{1}{2}$ houses in $1\frac{1}{2}$ hours, where the heck do all those $\frac{1}{2}$ -men come from?
- (10) Were you offended because of the "weak" language when we used "heck" instead of the more emphatic "hell" in number 9?
