Athletics and Character Building

The father of a young man who recently enrolled in a school wrote the president of the institution somewhat as follows:

"I hope that my boy becomes a great scholar. I would be very happy if he made a fine record in athletics, forensics or in other student life activities. Above all, however, I hope he will be a great man. If he is the right kind of man he will be intellectually honest. He will not blame others for his mistakes. He will not waste his time in envying those who do certain things better than he can do them. He will be fair in his dealings with his fellow men. He will not cheat to gain a temporary advantage over his fellows. He will be loyal to his school, his country and himself. If his school training helps him to become this kind of a man I will be satisfied if he is a great scholar or a great athlete."

Anyone who ponders the thought that was in the mind of this father will realize what a wonderful opportunity the athletic coach has in helping to develop the right kind of men. A boy who has had the proper athletic training does not blame others for his mistakes. He is not envious of his superiors to the point of wanting to handicap them in some way so that he himself, even though he be not deserving, shall attain the prize. He has learned to compete fairly, respect the rules of the game, enjoy life, be patriotic and lastly meet adversity standing up.

The father of this boy in question stated a physical education and athletic program objective unknowingly. While we commonly look upon athletics as predominantly physical, we are coming to realize as never before that their great and most lasting values are spiritual. Greater perfection in the playing of the game is always to be sought after, but all of this is the stalk which nourishes the real flower of the real process—fine sportsmanship. Where this is not true, athletic activities do not justify themselves. They cannot be neutral in the building of manhood; they must inevitably contribute either good or evil in the making of character.

Naturally it goes without saying that every boy cannot represent his school in football, baseball, or some other sport. But all boys can, and should, have the experience of playing group games under wise leadership. There is little the sheer act of playing a game of football that is inherently valuable. It is the sense of comradeship—the learning to work together—the give-and-take of winning and losing that impress their lessons most valuably. They are a symbol of life as a whole. The Duke of Wellington expressed that the fundamentals of a man's life date back to the games he played, when he said, "Waterloo was won on the playing fields of Eton." The goal of education is to fit the pupil for life. Athletics justify themselves by contributing towards this goal.

Brevard Takes the Measure of Terrier Pups: Score 13--0

Huggins and Orr Went Over for Touchdowns

Led by the brilliant running of Davis and Orr and the long-distance punting of Clayton, the Brevard lads opened the second half by passing and running their way way for a touchdown in the first five minutes of play. Their second score came in the middle of the fourth quarter after a Wofford fumble, deep in its own territory, had been recovered by Brevard.

The Terrier Pups threw a scare into the Brevard ranks early in the first period when Moore returned a punt from his own 10-yard line for 25 yards, and Danner advanced the ball to the 38-yard marker by a series of long end runs and spinner plays. It looked as if the Pups were on their way for a touchdown, but the Tornados buckled up and blocked a Wofford kick to pull themselves out of danger. The second quarter, which was marked by a kicking duel between Calvert of Wofford and Clayton of Brevard, was almost entirely played on the Pups' part of the field.

The Tornados came back in the second half with a bang to place the ball again in Wofford territory. A long pass from Clayton to Frady netted 25 yards and put Brevard on the freshman 20-yard line. Davis gained 11 yards off his own right tackle for a first down, and Orr scored on a lateral from Higgins around their left end. Clayton's pass to Frady for the extra point was knocked down by Calvert.

After an exchange of punts in the fourth quarter, Wofford advanced to Brevard's 40-yard line, but a long punt from Clayton to Hix was fumbled and recovered by Gaston on the Pups' 21-yard line. Wofford was penalized for excessive time outs, and Davis went around his right end for 19 more yards. Huggins scored the second touchdown by going over right tackle for 6 yards.

A short pass from Clayton to Gaston gave the extra point.

The junior Terriers made their last stand by flipping several long passes, only one of which, from Danner to Baker, was complete. When the contest ended the ball was on the Wofford 30-yard stripe.

Behind the lengthy and well placed kicks of Clayton, the eleven played cool, heads-up ball, and waited for their breaks, which were quickly converted into their only two touchdowns. Lail, Gaston, and Frady were stalwarts on defence, while Davis, Orr, and Huggins made several sensational runs.

Both teams displayed signs of being well coached, as there were only two penalties during the entire game.
