

Basketball Practice Begins

Wednesday afternoon, December 11, twenty-four boys answered the first call of Coach James to those interested in going out for the basketball team. Work was begun immediately; the boys learning how to handle the ball. A few fundamentals of the game were gone over by Coach James.

The only letter man reporting Wednesday was A. Fox who plays guard, but several of last year's squad are expected to come out as soon as examinations are over. The varsity is going to practice at the high school gymnasium at night according to a statement from Coach James. At the present no schedule has been arranged, but one consisting of twenty or more games can be arranged within a week or more. Little can be said as to the prospects of the team until practice actually gets under way after the Christmas holidays.

The Endless Game

Although the Delphian-Clio football game was played but once on the field Thursday, it has been played literally dozens of times since then, in the showers, on the campus, in the dormitories, or wherever one of the participants has found himself.

The regular Thursday night bull-sessions were devoted to this game, each play being analyzed three or four times in detail. Deal's running, Buchanan's quarterbacking, and the consistent playing of the line held the lime-light in the minds of the Delphian players and supporters, while the last quarter splurge and team injuries were foremost in the ranks of the Clios. Of course everyone was anxious to see Deal's injured knee and Reynolds skinned leg, which they very graciously and proudly exhibited when asked to do so, and often when they were not asked. Coach Bill Edwards expressed his joy and surprise over the victory of his Delphian aggregation, and too much praise can not be given him for his splendid work with the team.

When the lights flashed the last time everyone went to bed, only to find that it was necessary to play the game again before sleep would come.

Regardless of the injuries, which we regret very much, every one enjoyed the game and will look forward to next year when the two rival societies will again clash.

Tell - Tales

Lail did have a case of heart trouble, but that seems to have disappeared. The cure? Perhaps lack of encouragement, or maybe a new attraction.

Satenik says that old friends are the best - meaning Jack. Wonder how long it will last this time?

Eunice McCall did like him tall, dark, and handsome. Now she likes him tall and blonde.

Lewis still likes smiles from a certain sophomore. In fact, he was especially attached to the "Biddie-Coop" last week. Could cake have been the reason.

These boys who pay $1.50 radio fee, and then send their radio to the girls-well, it looks as if that is one time the girls get the better end of the bargain.

And in conclusion, I offer the puzzle of the week: How to get Bubber off "campus". All suggestions deeply appreciated.

Speaking of Christmas what girl living at the Sledge House likes a certain Carol?

In fact, it's right much fun-when you don't want to be doing something else.

What about these "operations" on the first floor each night? All the girls, however, seem to be getting along nicely.

Needless to say, it won't be long until Christmas.

Lost: A khaki blanket during operetta practice. If anyone knows about it please notify Miss Hatcher.

Due to the examinations and holidays the next issue of The Clarion will be printed January 10, 1936.

James Rogers

Cliosopic

The Cliosopic Literary Society held its regular meeting Tuesday evening, December 10. At this time plans were formulated for a contest which is to be held during the first six weeks of the next quarter. The following officers were elected:

President Bill Davis
Vice-President Gordon Barbour
Secretary-Treasurer Norman Plott
Chaplain Frank Heffner
Chairman of the Ways and Means Committee Earl Pearson
Critic Gilbert Smith
Censor Jack Armstrong
Sergeant-at-Arms Bob Summer

Euterpean

The Euterpean Literary Society met in the voice studio at 7 o'clock, December 10. After a brief devotional period conducted by Vivian Kreeger the election of officers for next quarter was held. Those elected were:

President Sarah King
Vice-President Martha Walker
Secretary-Treasurer Paula Briggs
Pionist Susie Maloney
Chaplain Lallah Mae Edwards
Chairman of Program Committee Wylma Ferguson

The society adjourned after giving a yell for the Clios.

Midweek Service at Taylor Hall

Thursday evening, December 12, the men of Taylor Hall met in their regular midweek devotional service. The president was in charge of the assembly. Throughout the meeting Christmas carols were sung.

Eddie Carlisle read the scripture lesson and A. G. Southerland led in prayer. The meeting was then turned over to James Crouse who gave an interesting talk on "The Right Attitude Towards the Christmas Spirit."

Crouse emphasized the need of sharing both material and spiritual blessings with both the poor and wealthy, so that our own Christmas may be enriched thereby. He stressed the fact that the poor needed our material blessings because they are less fortunate than we; the rich, by being the idle rich, would tend to neglect their spiritual lives, thereby we need to enrich them by spiritual blessings.

Miss Hayes dismissed the assembly.

X The Cross-Wit Puzzle X

Marco: "I suppose your home town is one of those places where everyone goes down to meet the train?"

Little Audrey: "What train?"

Mary Ross: "Not only has Harry wrecked my whole life but he has spoiled my whole evening."

Pruett (at the operetta): "What are the prices for your seats, Miss?"
Emma Matin: "Front seats, thirty-five cents, back seats twenty-five cents, and program a penny."

Pruett: "I'll sit on a program, please."

Mr. Williams: "Ruth, you flatter me by lingering to hear the remainder of my problem when all the other students have dashed away at the sound of the dinner bell."

Ruth Sylvester: "What? Has the dinner bell rung?" And she dashed towards the dining room.
