News-in-Brief

PRESS CONFERENCE

Sturgis May, sports editor of the CLARION, and Monk Landreth, news editor, are attending the North Carolina Collegiate Press Convention which is now convening at the Hotel Charlotte, in Charlotte, North Carolina. They left the campus early Tuesday morning, and will return Saturday or Sunday. The conference registration was Wednesday, and the convention began on Thursday. All departments of the college newspaper will be discussed. Several famous journalists are presenting lectures to the student journalists.

A DRAMA SOON

Miss Smith, director of dramatics, recently announced that the dramatic club will present a three act drama within the next few weeks. Several plays have been considered and as yet two or three remain in the list from which the choice will be made.

METHODIST CONFERENCE

At present the Western North Carolina Methodist Conference is convening in Salisbury, North Carolina; Mr. Coltrane and Mr. Carlisle are in attendance at this meeting. There are many important to be made by this conference concerning Brevard College.

STUDENT CONFERENCE

The North Carolina State Wide Methodist Student Conference will meet this year in Durham November 6-8.

Jimmie Rogers is heading the delegation from Brevard College, and anyone who desires to attend this conference should consult with him for details.

There are six colleges in this zone that have, in previous years, sent delegates to this conference. Dr. Smart and several other famous religious educators and leaders will conduct the discussion groups and address the entire assembly at various times.

SCHOOL JEWELRY

The order for rings and other jewelry will be made tomorrow. Only sophomores may get rings.

Straw Vote

Thursday or Friday of next week the Clarion staff will sponsor a straw vote among the students.

This vote will carry a ballot with only three candidates: the republican candidate, the democratic candidate, and socialist candidate.

There will be a special ballot for those who are now legal voters in the state of North Carolina, and it is from this ballot that the main rating of the school will be taken, for minors could not aid their party by voting. However, the vote of those who are not legal voters will be the most popular.

Political parties have been organized, and there is a great deal of interest in the development of all the parties. Some prominent men in politics of the two major parties have been invited to speak to the students at assembly periods during the next week.

Day Student's Room

Plans are underway for the preparing of a rest room for the girl students from town and surrounding communities who attend the College daily. Room 112 on the first floor of the Administration Building is to serve this purpose. This room is to be completely furnished.

Mrs. Coltrane Talks To Club

Tuesday night Mrs. Coltrane was the principal speaker at the Ballad and Folklore Club, furnishing the group an excellent background for the study of the ballad type. The other speaker, Margaret Raper, presented three of the older popular ballads.

Recently-chosen officers for the club are Margaret Ryan, president; Mary McLarty, vice-president and chairman of the program committee; and William Turner, secretary. Miss Craig is faculty sponsor.

Debaters' Club

The Debaters' club, a branch of the Brevard College Forensic Club, held its first formal meeting October 15, 1936; and the following officers were elected:

President	Paul Westbrook
Vice-president	Horace Raper
Secretary	Geraldine DeVier
Treasurer	Margaret Wilson
Critic	Mr. Bennett

Horace Raper talked on the way to proceed in planning a debate. Then the critic outlined a program which the club plans to follow. Parliamentary law is to be observed closely, discussions on phases of the work were presented, debates within the societies are to be emphasized, and even socials will occur at times. Humorous debates will constitute the main features of the socials.

The club was assured that the faculty is back of it one hundred per cent, and it is probable that the literary societies will sponsor the debates. This will most likely stimulate more interest among the student body in debating.

There was a mistake in the statement of the debate query. It is "Resolved: That Congress should be allowed to state maximum working hours and a minimum wage scale."

This club will meet every Thursday evening at eight o'clock in room 314. Students interested in this work are urged to attend.

The man who agrees with everything you say lies to others also.

Morning Horrors

By "Monk" Landreth

I awake with a start. Scuffling feet run past my doorway. What can be the matter; is the building on fire? I jump out of bed and run to the door and gaze out. Accosting a passerby I ask "Whassa matter, pal?"

"Nothing," is the reply, "but it is time for breakfast."

Slowly I realize that it is no longer night. Dawn has broken, and with it a new day has begun.

Glancing at my watch, I see that its hands mockingly read five minutes till seven o'clock. Realizing that I have only five minutes in which to get to breakfast, I dress in what seems to me to be record breaking time, lock my door, and run like a man "possessed of demons" to the dining room. I grasp the door knob only to realize that I am too late. The door has been locked, and I must go through the morning with an aching void in my mid-section.

I slowly retrace my steps to the room and attempt to make it spotless so that Mrs. McRae will not leave her calling card. The hands of my watch quickly revolve to the fatal moment, ninety-three, when my first class begins; but I must stop my story, because the morning now becomes a pleasure instead of a horror. (Oh Yeah!)
