

Name Poll Nets Little But Quips

A Clarion poll to determine a name for the cafeteria unearthed suggestions ranging from the sublime to the extreme. The names picked by the boys indicated that they were more concerned with the price of food, while the girls were more interested in the quality.

Looking ruefully at his depleted stock of meal tickets, Howard Graham insisted that the cafeteria should be christened "Gaither's Gold Mine." In the same vein of thought was Willard Buffkin's proposal of "Rich Man's Kitchen."

Hope Leonard's laughing admission that no matter what name was chosen, the cafeteria would still be the "Chow Hall" to her, was seconded by Bill Lassley, Bill Baldwin, and Dean Whitson, who also approved of the title "Mess Hall."

A touch of the exotic was added by Walter "Dizzy" Harris who proposed the "Cafe Rendezvous" and Ellen Faulkner who endorsed "The Casbah."

Chester Baker and Bob McAlister voiced the choices of "Pto maine Domaine" and "Ptomaine Tavern," while Bill Carter, Jerry Crawford, and Lander Rudisill voiced the opposite opinion with their nominations of "Gourmand's Delight," "Healthy Haven" and "Student's Retreat." As these boys were making their decisions, Archie Miller decided that the cafeteria should be named "The Cafeteria."

With her English literature book propped up in front of her, Mildred Skipper announced that the cafeteria should be named the "Mede Hall."

While Carolyn Collins debated the merits of the "Gaitheteria" and "Bonaparte's Retreat," Ruth Dougherty chimed in with her choice of the little crickets over behind the players bench, where we caught wind of an adjective or two from a few disgusted members of the team.

In less than an hour we were ready to leave. Our destination? You could never guess. We were all out for just any little old place where they served anything that slightly resembled food. We stopped at a wide place in the road, and out of the windows and doors of that bus we poured. I'll just say we ate a sufficient amount—I don't want to embarrass myself or anyone else by telling how much, but I do think that it had been a long, long time since our two chaperones had eaten!

Back in the bus—"Oh, My Stars! Who mutilated somebody? There's blood all over the place?" "Now don't get excited, it's just Earl! Nc. No. he didn't kill anybody. His nose is bleeding—he's from the flat country, y' know, and the altitude is about to get him." We stopped in Crossnore for a bit, while the doctor there got him straightened out.

"The Food Foundry."

Other suggestions were "The Beanery," "The Cabernet," "The Chatterbox" and "Tastee Tavern."

However, most students echoed the statement made by John Gordon, who, when questioned as to his preference declared, "I can't think of any particular name for the cafeteria, but I do know that it is the greatest discovery since the atomic bomb."

Now—it's straight for home. Straight, eh? Ha! That was a funny one! You just don't know this crowd. We had to stop in Asheville and eat, again! Of course, delicate little old me couldn't hold much. To think, three hot dogs filled me up and after that little meal I had eaten earlier. The chaperones were hungry again, too. In fact, if we have taken up a general collection from everybody after that last stop we couldn't have made the down payment on a free lunch.

As we drove up at the college there was a pack of blood hounds about to be set loose to come find us—I guess they thought we had conned the bus or something! Don't get any ideas, we're not that crazy!!

We just declared that we'd never do it again but did you by any chance see a bus load of students going to Hendersonville last Monday?? Told a dinky, didn't we??
