

Plans Are Made For Basketball Season; Girls Form New Team

Under the name "Brevard College Legionettes," a team of girls will take the court against a quintet from a neighboring college when basketball season opens. This will be the first time in five years that the college has been represented by girls in this sport.

The schedule of games will be announced soon. Anticipated are contests with Lees-McRae junior college, Spartanburg junior college, Appalachian State Teachers college, Mitchell college, and Wingate.

The Brevard college team will be under the leadership of Miss Louise Moseley, girls' physical education director. Miss Moseley has coached basketball teams at Simpsonville, S. C., high school; Blue Mountain College, Mississippi; and at Spartanburg, S. C., Junior College.

The Monroe Wilson post of the American Legion in Brevard has provided black and gold satin uniforms for the girls; and the squad will play under the name "Brevard College Legionettes."

The program of the Legionettes, Miss Moseley has indicated, will not be intensely competitive, as is the men's schedule. She feels, however, that the college and the town will enjoy the variety and color of girls' basketball. "The team will benefit," she said, "not only from the games, but from the varied contacts that the contests will provide with girls of other colleges in the region."

Miss Moseley has explained that the team will follow strictly the rules set up by the National Section of Women's Athletics, an affiliate of the American Association for Health and Physical Ed-of the Brevard squad boiled out of the stadium slapping backs and mashing hats over the final outcome, which saw Brevard on top top with a score of 7-6.

PUNTS FLY IN SECOND TILT

On a typical, nippy Thanksgiving afternoon of the same season the Tornadoes met the Lions again, this time in Baptist territory. In this battle a confident and inspired Tornado eleven met a determined, but crestfallen Mars Hill team.

Tryouts for the Legionette squad began Monday, November 13. According to Miss Moseley, very few girls who were on "A" teams in high school have turned out; however, with hard practice, she expects the girls to make a fair showing.

The following twenty-eight girls have been competing for positions on the cage squad:

Freshmen: Patsy Maley, Daphne Bowers, Nancy Medford, Joan Medford, Joan Gamble, Gloria Starnes, Mary Grace Nance, Norma Jean Merritt, Martha Washburn, and Mae Higgins.

Montgomery Goes To Convention

Miss Esther Montgomery of the Brevard college home Economics department attended the convention of the North Carolina Home Economics association, held at Southern Pines on November 3 and 4.

On this afternoon, Coach Bob Andrews recalls, psychology won the game. Partly because of the fact that Brevard for the past several years had twisted the Lion's tail with clocklike regularity, the Mars Hill boys were in no frame of mind to take on a tornado.

About the middle of the second quarter, David Price scooted through the center of the Mars Hill line and blocked one of Treat's kicks to get the ball for Brevard. And Wilkerson on a 15-yard end-around made Price's blocking pay off. The half ended with the ball in midfield in possession of the Tornadoes.

The second half was a shower of kicks, with equally matched lines fighting to a standstill around midfield and with the backs of both teams pinned down.

This Tornado eleven accomplished a feat unique in Brevard gridiron history—it whipped the Mars Hill Lions twice in the same year.

Poet's Corner

Thanksgiving Day

I remember how Mother fixed for us
The dinners fit for kings,
And how she'd make the pies and cakes

While we'd play games and sing.
"All right, come to dinner," she would call,
And I'd hurry to my place,
And I'd snatch a piece of icing
As our heads were bowed in grace.

There'd be turkey, and stuffing,
and cranberry sauce,
And peas fixed just as I'd like,
And hot bread . . . and butter,
And pie . . . and everything fixed just right.

I'd eat, and eat, and eat,
'Till I was really stuffed,
Then Mother'd say when I leaned back,

"Are you sure you've had enough?"
But today I see through different eyes

Things I saw then at only a glance;
Material food is not as important now
As spiritual food to advance . . .
