

WARNING!

An increasing quantity of promotional material from foreign schools and colleges has prompted the Southern Association of Colleges and Schools to urge students to investigate thoroughly foreign institutions before enrolling.

A Southern Association statement said some foreign colleges and schools are using high pressure tactics to sell programs of questionable academic quality and have deceived American students and some college officials.

Students planning to study abroad and who plan to transfer the credit to an American institution should first determine whether the college or university in the United States will accept the credits, the statement continued.

Failure to check in advance the acceptability of courses offered by foreign institutions can easily result in the loss of credits, it was pointed out.

The Southern Association, the accrediting agency for colleges and schools in 11 Southern states, also issued a similar warning to high school students planning to enroll in summer programs offered by foreign high schools.

"This warning," the statement said, "should not be considered a blanket indictment of foreign institutions for many of these schools and colleges offer quality educational programs."

Spring-g-g-g Fever

There seems to be an epidemic spreading throughout the campus. At first mention of this we might conclude that it is "Mono". However, though there have been a number of students afflicted with such an illness, the disease of which I speak is much more widespread. I might even go so far as to say that it effects nearly 99% of the student body. Many have this malady without even realizing it. Could you be a victim? If you have any of the following symptoms, you do possibly have this in either an acute or mild form: (1) A profound dislike to be in closed places, more specifically—the dorm. (2) A desire to stay outside among the stimulating creations of nature. (3) A tendency to become lost in daydreams. (4) A blatant atmosphere of nonchalantness. (5) An impelling urge to go places and do things, to "let your hair down," so to speak. (6) A desire to be with that "special someone" constantly.

These are just some of the more evident symptoms of this strange infirmity. As far as a cure is concerned, medical science hasn't as yet been able to produce even a mild restorative. This strange affliction, commonly know as "Spring Fever" is one which will only subside with time. Therefore, since we have no means to overcome this, we might as well make the best of it—for this disease is actually one which can be enjoyable as well as unharmed. The most important danger to be concerned with is allowing it to dominate our lives, making us lazy and unmindful of our studies. But if controlled properly, this can be a disease which will serve as an incentive to learning.

Roll Over, Beethoven

It was so very quiet for so very long. There was hardly ever a sound, except the occasional opening and closing of the doors, the scuff of Weejuns hurrying their wearers to the Soda Shop, and the sweet nothings that couples in love whispered to each other in the dark corners. A thick coat of dust settled daily over the furniture and floors, and was duly swept up once a day.

Occasionally, a sophomore would wander through and stop for a moment to reminisce, remembering how it was last year. Ghosts of the past seemed to filter in with the sunbeams. It was strange when one imagined the place as it used to be, Bud and Vickie dancing in a corner, Mike Harris and Carolyn Ricker doing some sort of wild gyrations in the middle of the floor, and Bert Daniel dancing with anybody, anywhere. And it was sad, when one saw the empty room with hardly any sign of life. There was no music, no dancing, and nobody laughing over a joke.

That was last week, and last month, and last semester.

WHAM! With almost stunning speed, the whole picture has changed! From a quiet, dull, dusty, empty room, the student lounge has been converted to a veritable beehive of activity. From 9 in the morning until 10 at night, the walls resound with the beat of the current top ten, and the entire CCB vibrates gently as a result of dozens of students doing dozens of different dances. It is really amazing that the installation of a jukebox can bring about such a drastic change. Gone is the peace and quiet of first semester, the empty student lounge, and the eternal complaint "There's nothing to do around here."

Roll over, Beethoven, and make room for a crowd of dancers, one jukebox, and the sound of "Shotgun."

Anybody got a quarter to feed the jukebox?

Letter To The Editor

The Editor, The Clarion—

With a stagnant lounge on our campus, Ken Query suggested to the S.G.A. that a jukebox be placed in the lounge.

Last week, through the work of the S.G.A., we received a jukebox. Even though it does consume an overwhelming number of coins, it is a good change. Now, contrary to the past, it is "safe" for anyone to enter the lounge at any time. Are there more things to come from S.G.A.? I hope so.

WILL IT CONTINUE

Below is the main body of a letter to the Brevard College student body. It is from the program director of the Child Welfare division of the Save the Children Federation. We think that this is the best plea we can make for Save-a-Child. Please read it, and decide for yourself.

Dear Sponsors,

Now Yung Hwan has grown up a lot both in mind and body. He graduated from his primary school last February and entered a fine middle school through a difficult entrance test. He now seems to be very proud and happy to be a middle school student. Now he realizes that he is no longer a child but has reached the age when he has to behave with more prudence, diligence and ambition to be able to compete with his classmates more efficiently. The boy says he finds many new and interesting things at his school. He says that he felt a little uneasy and awkward when he entered this school first but now he is quite used to the new life of his school and gets along well with his classmates.

Since the time of last status report, the boy has grown two and half inches. He is gentle and kind and he gets along well with his classmates. His favorite subject is Korean language. During his leisure time, he likes to read books, but he often does not have enough books to read. We are sure that this year will be a rewarding year to the boy.

The family is living in a small rented room in the western district of Seoul city. The boy's mother does house chores for her neighbors. She works hard but her earnings are very small. The boy's 23-year-old sister Yung Ja works at a small company and she helps her family with her earnings. The boy's 20-year-old sister works as a housemaid but her earnings are not enough even to meet the expenses of her own. His 17-year-old sister quit school last year for her family could not afford her school fees. His 9-year-old twin sisters Yung Sook and Yung Soon are in 4th grade of primary school.

The Yoon family is in need of help very much and so we sincerely hope the sponsors, Brevard College, Student Body will continue their warm-hearted help for the boy's further education and welfare.

We recommend that the sponsorship be continued.
