

Strange Personnel At Cantrell House Mother And Father The Freshmen

ALL THE COMFORTS of home and a college education too—this is the wealth of the Cantrell House boys. Above is their "home away from home."

Irvin Prescott

Many reports have been in the previous editions of the Clarion about new personnel on the campus. Two dedicated people have been erroneously overlooked. "Mamma" Pickens and "Boss Man" Morrow, who through a sense of responsibility, love of Brevard College, or through a complete expression of idiocy have taken the job of being "mamma's" to a group of eight freshmen students that are housed in the Cantrell House.

Actually, Bob "Mamma" Pickens and Dave "Boss Man" Morrow seem to be well pleased with their job. They remarked that the group of men students are "usually" well behaved, have good study habits, and are just a group of "good guys."

The men over in Cantrell, although a little crowded, have life going pretty good for them. Instead of having desks in their bedrooms, the men have two study rooms. One reason for this is that the eight freshmen live four in each bedroom. They have a television room, outside fire grill, and both bathtubs and showers. They will be getting a pay telephone and a campus phone very shortly. By the time this article is printed they should have possession of a refrigerator. "Mamma" and "Boss Man" collect ten cents a day from everyone to buy supplies for a party when the refrigerator arrives. The group also have permission to have chaperoned parties with just the men and their dates.

When asked about life at Cantrell, the usual reply was very favorable. Many expressed that the privacy and the study habits were distinct advantages over what they thought dorm life would be like. As Dave Morrow so aptly put it, "I prefer Cantrell over the dorm because of the greater degree of freedom, but we must remember that with this freedom comes a greater responsibility."

As in most cases, however, all is not just "peaches and cream." Cantrell is on the demerit system by which the proctor can give any number of demerits for an offense, just so it doesn't exceed the maximum demerits regulated for that offense. There have been a few cases this year that Bob or Dave had to throw a few demerits around. Also, Larry Kohler pointed to the fact that Cantrell is in just the right location for it to be very inconvenient at times. For example, men students at Greene or Taylor can get up in the morning fifteen minutes before class, and if they hurry may be able to grab a quick bite of breakfast. Cantrell boys have to leave the "Shack" well in advance of class in order to be on time. Another inconvenience cited is the walk in wet weather. There was only one person who said the place was overcrowded, but this was counteracted by a statement of another who said that he believed he would prefer three roommates to one. A complaint also brought out was the fact that if a student had a problem with his subject, and no one else in Cantrell House had that subject, then the poor student who had the problem usually kept it until the next class. "It would be nice just to be able to go to a room down the hall to get help," said Larry.

This reporter observed during the interviews that there seemed to be a sense of congeniality among the students. Although it can be called overcrowded, this has not caused a very bad problem. Pickens and Morrow expressed their delight with the way the men acted and remarked that their study life was excellent. I heard this phrase more than once during my interview. "Ah, it's a long walk, but it's worth the hike, so why worry about it?"

Riegel Speaks

Phi Theta Kappa began the season of Friday at Four on Friday, September 24, with a talk by Dr. Roberta Riegel.

Dr. Riegel's subject was "The Language of the Mountaineers." She discussed examples of archaic English still spoken by the people in isolated regions of the mountains. She ended her talk by giving three short dialogues in the dialect of the hill people.

"The Language of the Mountaineer" was the first in a series of programs on mountain culture. The next Friday at Four will be a program on "Folk Narratives" to be given by Mr. Artus Moser on October 8.
