

Something New At UNC?

Crossnore Needs Help

As college students engaged in the full time activity of helping themselves by earning an education, they often tend to become self-centered. It is easy to forget those unwritten obligations to the rest of humanity. But these obligations do not vanish because students ignore them, and they do not become any less "their obligation."

When students see themselves or their organizations becoming a closed shop, they should try to focus attention away from the petty campus issues to a service-oriented project. Phi Theta Kappa has done this. Hopefully, students have noticed their posters and have heard the members discussing Crossnore School.

This P.T.K. project is aimed at the goal of service — service to 191 youngsters from homes broken by divorce, death, and separation. Crossnore School is located near Grandfather Mountain in Avery County and attempts to educate, love, and minister to the needs of children in grades 1 - 12.

What's so great about Crossnore? It exists solely on the contributions of those people who thought of someone else. No great self-sacrifice is involved. All you have to do is care and save trading stamps, good used clothing, and coupons that are normally thrown away.

It's really not too much trouble to drop trading stamps into the box in the student store.

Do something for someone else — CARE.

Special Form University of North Carolina

There's something new at the University of North Carolina School of Nursing, the transfer student. She enters nursing school as a junior instead of a freshmen. She also studies under a new "integrated Curriculum."

Ten junior transfers were admitted last year and 32 were admitted this fall. The current junior class also includes 54 students who completed their pre-nursing courses here.

Eventually all nursing students will begin the program as juniors. Before 1967, all nursing students came here as freshmen and were enrolled for four years.

What is an integrated curriculum?

It's a series of courses allowing a student to cut across specialty areas — such as medical-surgical nursing, psychiatric nursing, maternal and child nursing, public health nursing. It focuses on general nursing rather than specialized nursing.

"In terms of the integrated curriculum, we're doing something now that a lot of nursing schools have talked about doing," Nursing Dean Lucy Conant says. "We want the students to think about a patient's total nursing care rather than segments of care."

Until now, a student nurse has been offered a mixture of general education and nursing education throughout her four years of nursing school.

The new nursing curriculum means UNC's Nursing School is now recruiting a "brand new group of students," according to the Dean Conant.

The reference is to the science-oriented student in colleges and universities, junior colleges and community colleges. Pre-nursing requires a lot of science, both biological and social.

"We want people who are bright academically and who enjoy and care about people and like to work with people," Dean Conant says.

The new curriculum does not isolate student nurses from typical campus life. Student nurses at UNC are extremely active in campus affairs.

Phi Theta Kappa To Sell Directories

Honor society, Phi Theta Kappa, has been working on a money making project for this year. As in the past, the project is concerned with the school directories which contain a list of the names, home addresses and telephone numbers of both the students and the faculty. Naturally, such a directory is indispensable to the social minded student body here at Brevard College.

The directories should be much nicer looking this year. Pat Glass has designed a new and brighter cover. It consists of a white background with Phi Theta Kappa's emblem in blue on the front.

The directories should be ready to go on sale shortly after Thanksgiving. They will sell for 35c each and should prove to be quite profitable. In any case, students who live pretty close to each other should find one a necessity for any dates they wish to make over the Christmas vacation.

Thus, the honor society is in fact doing a service to the students in the publication of such a directory. The inexpensive manual will certainly be of great aid to the students and in the process it will fulfill the society's monetary needs.

Alumni To Be On Campus Tomorrow

The following Brevard graduates will speak to students about their schools this Saturday, November 23:

Jennie Munro—U.N.C. Chapel Hill
Jim Alderman - U. T.
Jo Ann Pace — Mars Hill
Minnie Lloyd — Greensboro College
Jackie Lawing — Appalachian
Roger Jones — Western
Susie Jinnette — U.N.C. Greensboro
Dennis Carrick — Wake Forest
Rod Binkley — Lenoir-Rhyne (maybe)

The students will be in the cafeteria at 5:00 p.m. Saturday to eat and talk with any students interested in their college. They will have materials for

Debbie van Sciver To Present Concert

Debbie van Sciver, sophomore of Brevard College, will be presented in concert tonight in Dunham Auditorium in the first formal student recital. The program will begin at 8:15.

Debbie is a music major and will be a featured soloist on the oboe.

She will perform music from three different historical periods. These include the Baroque Sonata No. 6 in G Minor by Vivaldi, the first movement of the classical Concerto in C Major K. 314 by Mozart, and the first movement of Sonata for Oboe and Piano by Hindemith, a contemporary composer. Piano accompanist for Miss van Sciver will be Dony's Kaye Holtzclaw, also a sophomore.

In addition, other instrumental music will include a brass quintet, a clarinet quartet, and an ensemble of both brass and woodwind choirs playing Sonata pian' e forte. This particular by Gabrieli, composed during the Italian Renaissance, is performed by the two instrumental groups separated from each other in two different locations within the auditorium.

At 6:30 the group will go to Dunham Hall where each student will speak of the college he attends the helps which Brevard gave them and their difficulties in making the transfer from a two-year to a four-year college. At 7:30 we shall attend the basketball game.
