Outing Club To Be Formed

Both Mr. Toby Ives and his wife have had a great deal of experience with various outside sports, and they have consented to form an Outing Club here at the College.

The outings will commence in the Spring when Mr. Ives will have more time. He has suggested such canoeing sports as shooting rapids, tubing rapids or just plain survival in rapids.

Persons interested in these should be swimmers, although they must wear a life preserver whether he knows how to swim or not. Swimming instruction will be held in Brevard's swimming pool.

Other outings will be such things as horse back riding and Rock and Mountain Climbing. These outings will be conducted during weekends since there are no Saturday classes.

During Easter vacation a sailing and diving paradise outing is planned. This will be held in Florida, with the sailing enthusiasts wallowing or beating and tacking at quay Largo and Miami, Florida.

There will be reef scuba diving and snorkling off of the coast for those who are able and instruction for the not so able.

The weekend trips should cost in the area of $10 to $15.

The East vacation trip in Florida will run in the vicinity of $25 - $30 if enough students are interested. These prices will include food and transportation.

New CB Nears Completion With Cost Near $500,000

Within the next week, Brevard College officials anticipate the completion of the McLarty-Goodson Classroom Building, with an approximate cost estimated at $500,000.

Construction on the new building started last spring and was included in a series of buildings that have been built on the College campus due to the building program that was introduced by the late college president, Dr. Emmett K. McLarty. The new educational facility is named for him.

The new building encompasses twice the space of the old Classroom Building and it also provides individual office space for faculty members.

Tutoring And Recreation Program Is Organized

A tutoring and recreation program for young children in the Brevard is being organized with the majority of the volunteers coming from the Brevard College campus.

Doug Shaur, Carol Craig, and Mike Hruby, representing the Western Carolina Community Action Program, met with 13 college students Wednesday night in the Faculty Lounge of Beam Administration Building and discussed tentative plans for the organization of the program.

The program is organized for children of the grade school level.

ing is air - conditioned, which makes attending classes a more pleasurable experience during the hot days of fall and spring.

Furnishings for the new building are expected to be complete sometime this week. A rear screen projection facility in lecture classes is one asset with which the faculty is well pleased. Also, a new language lab, full equipped, will have a place in the new building.

The Old CB has been ordered razed by the Board of Trustees of the College. In short, the building will be torn down. As of now, no future building plans have been released by the Board.

Tutoring will start Monday night with all students that are interesting in going up to the Rosenwald Community in Brevard and helping the kids with their homework and also working with other kids in the elementary math and English.

The recreation program will be scheduled for Saturday afternoons in the future.

The plans for the future for the program also includes outings and trips to various areas around Transylvania County.

Anyone that is interested in joining the program is urged to contact either Tim Ruttenber or Ken Eaton.

Ratio Of Vote Is Set At 70:1

The proposed constitution for Brevard College was voted into reality Wednesday in a campus wide balloting which saw the proposal passed by a 70:1 ratio.

The voting was not even close and from the outset it was evident that the new Constitution would be passed. The final breakdown of the votes gave the favorable margin of 354 votes for and five votes against.

The voting followed a Wednesday morning assembly in Dunham Auditorium in which the Constitution Committee members were open for questions from the student body concerning the constitution. Only a few questions were posed by the students, and it was feared by many of the members that the students were not interested in the proposal and would not bother to vote. This doubt was quickly erased with the first returns of the evening.

Members of the Constitution Committee worked during the summer and also during the first two weeks of school in readying the proposal for the students. Members of the Committee are Gaines Bowers, Ken Eaton, Keith Holland, Kerry Kille, Mack King, Dean L. H. Lawing, D. J. Padgett, Maureen Scott, Ron Smith and former history professor, Richard Wilson.

The voting was done in the A. J. Myers Cafeteria and was held during the lunch hours. Due to a lack of majority of the student body passing on the proposal, the voting was extended to include the dinner hours also.

The new constitution is designed to give as much power to the students as possible. It is a flexible piece of work that was designed not to spell out every rule and order of the college, but to form a system in which the students can decide and answer many questions for themselves. One of the major changes in the Constitution is the almost complete separation of the social department, called the Social Board, and the student legislature. The new Social Board will act independently of the Student Government Association (SGA).

Another new creation that has been formed through the passage of the new Constitution is the Student Legislature. This new organization removes the majority of the student voice from the president of the SGA and switches it to the Legislature. The Legislature is modeled after the United States form of government, The Congress, and will work on the same general principles.

Election Dates Are Released

Elections for various officers for the College government will be held Monday, Sept. 22, according to Keith Holland, chairman of the Elections Committee.

Among the officers that need to be filled are a treasurer for the Student Government Association (a sophomore), two sophomores for the Judicial Board and one freshman for the Judicial Board.

Other officers that must be elected are a president, vice-president and secretary - treasurer for both the sophomore and freshman classes and four representatives from each class to serve in the Student Legislature.

Each candidate has until 12 o'clock midnight Monday to file. All prospective candidates must file with the elections officer assigned to their respective dorm. These are Wayne Lottinville, East Beam, Sherry Keeter, West Beam, Keith Holland, Green, Ken Eaton, Taylor and D. J. Padgett, Jones.

All students who are enrolled in Brevard College and are within the requirements stated for the position are eligible to run for office.
