College Students Deserve Respect

All across the United States, professors, teachers, students, and administration officials are holding their breath to see what the new academic year will bring in the field of student revolts and demands. The air is tense and the atmosphere is one of anticipation.

But what of all the demands the students have made in the past several years? Have they been taken by the college officials, rebuked and then cast aside? For the most part, the answer is a simple no.

College officials have indeed taken an interest in the gripes of their students and have been working on their problems. Out of this have come many new advantages for students. It has, in some instances, caused some colleges to shake off the shackles that have bound them in the past decades and have brought them roaring into the complex society of the twentieth century.

For other colleges, the change is still occurring, but at a more subdued pace. At these colleges, there are seldom the mass demonstrations, the riots, the sit-ins, or the take over of the administration buildings. But, there is still a prevalent atmosphere of change.

Whether the change comes forcibly, or through the slower channels of legislation, it is still good. All of the changes are granting the students more rights as maturing, young adults.

Although the recognition has been slow in coming, we are glad to see that leaders of the older generations have come to realize that whether a man is carrying the tools of education on a college campus or the tools of war in a foreign country, he deserves the respect of a man and not the reproof of being an overgrown child.

One In A Series

We are now in the new education building that has been named the McLarty - Goodson Classroom Building and for the most part, the students and faculty of Brevard College seem more than just pleased. It is not just a step up in the education opportunities offered here at the College, but indeed it is a leap forward.

The new facility was among the list of new buildings that was proposed by the late president, Dr. Emmett K. McLarty, Jr. Included in that list are buildings that have become a part of the lives of the students here at the College. These include Beam Dormitory, the Administration Building, the Science Building, the Cafeteria, and the Library. Each and every one of these Buildings are visited and used by student, faculty, and staff alike and have played an important role in the daily lives of these people.

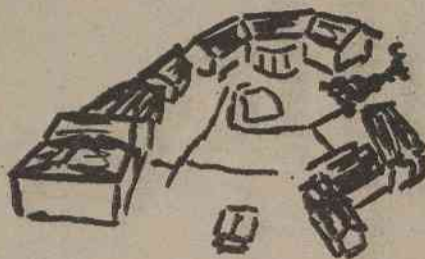

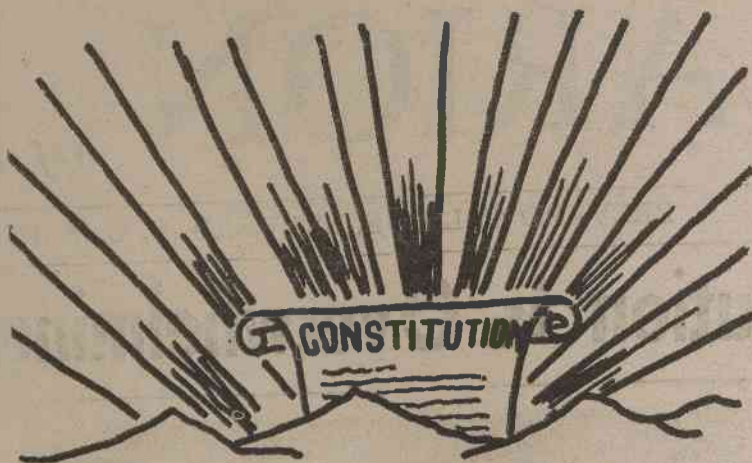

It is to the hopes and dreams of the late president that we can attribute these new buildings and we should remember him occasionally for giving us these new educational advantages.

A NEW DAWNING

Letters To Editor...

Dear Editor

It has come to my attention that many students are asking the question, "What can I do to relieve the pressure of studying all the time?" After attending the intramural meeting held Monday night, I am concerned that participation in it would be a worthwhile answer. Under the direction of Coach Burch and student director Ralph Lundy, I am confident this will be a successful year in intramurals at Brevard College.

They are capable people but the fate of the intramural program does not lie in their hands alone. Rather, it lies in the hands of every male student at Brevard College. Only if every student participates can we have a successful program. They are offering rugged sports such as flag football, cross-country, track, basketball and softball. However, if you are physically unable to participate in these, there are also table tennis and eight-ball tournaments.

So as a fellow student at Brevard College, I urge you to support the intramural program and see your I-M manager and sign up for some event. This way you will not be faced with the question, "What do I do to relieve the pressure?" You will have already found the answer.

Sincerely yours,
Randall Essick

(Editor's Note: The following is a letter sent to Dean Whicker from a 1969 Brevard College graduate.)

Dear Dean Whicker:

This is just a note of thanks to all of the people at Brevard who gave me the chance to find where I was going as well as what I was capable of achieving. I have transferred to N. C. State, and using the discipline of study that I acquired while at Brevard, I am doing well.

Brevard provides academic standards that help kids pull through the jump from high school to a university. Although there are excellent teachers here, nothing can replace that personal approach that Brevard is deservedly known for.

Brevard still has even more potential, and I hope that with the new president, the college can continue to move forward even through difficult times.

Thank you again. By the way, State accepted 66 of my hours from Brevard.

Sincerely yours,
(Name withheld upon request.)

Intramural Program Organized; Ralph Lundy Is Named Director

The Brevard Intramural Program started off with a bang this week and for the first time, the I-M program has a student director, Ralph Lundy.

There are some new addition of sports this year. Handball, waterpolo, and wrestling include the new experimental individual sports. Softball will be the new team sport.

Flag football and basketball still remain to be the most competitive team sports. Other sports that have been played for several years are volleyball, a cross-country and track meet and a six mile relay. Individual competition will include ping-pong, eight ball, tennis and badminton.

With all the various sports, there is a great deal of room for one to participate in the sport of one's interest. There seems to be a lot of spirit and rivalry in the different dorm floors.

Beautiful trophies will be

Millers Return To Music Dept.

Mr. and Mrs. Harvey Miller have returned to the Department of Music here at Brevard College.

The Miller's first came to Brevard in the fall of 1960. Mr. Miller then had an A. B., a B. M., and an M.A. degree from the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill. He had a double major, voice and piano, and a minor in violin. Mrs. Miller had a Bachelor of Music from UNC in piano and in organ.

While here, Mr. Miller taught voice, piano, and music theory. His wife was for two years secretary to the music faculty, and gave private piano lessons. He also directed the Glee Club for four years, and the Civic Chorus for two. Mrs. Miller accompanied the Civic Chorus for two years, and worked with the youth and Junior Choirs of the Methodist Church.

The talented couple began further graduate study at Indiana University, Bloomington, Indiana, in the fall of 1967. She completed her M. A. in organ, and he is presently a candidate for a Ph.D. in composition, with voice as his major performance areas.

Mr. Miller is now teaching private voice, private piano, and music appreciation, and is director of the Glee Club. Mrs. Miller teaches private organ and voice, and sophomore keyboard harmony. She is also organist - director of the Chancel Choir of the First United Methodist Church.

Mr. Miller received his high school diploma from the School of the Blind in Raleigh. Because of his restricted vision, he has developed fantastic acumen in memorizing music, and just about everything else. Although he was aided by Mrs. Miller in his last years of undergraduate and graduate research, his composition for the Ph.D. degree was composed and transcribed entirely independently.

The Millers have two little girls, eight and five, and live on Morningside Drive here in Brevard.

given again this year. One large trophy will be given to the highest individual point-getter. A small trophy will be earned by the floor champion. The most efficient team manager will be given a trophy. Lastly, the individual champions of the individual sports will also win a small trophy.

In the meeting held Monday, Coach Burch emphasized importance of organization and being on time. This is a must for every team and every individual to make this a banner year.

TENNIS MEETING

There will be a meeting Monday afternoon in the gymnasium classroom for all young men that are interested in trying out for the tennis team, according to Miss Neal, head coach.

The meeting will be held at four o'clock.
