

PLANS FOR CELEBRATING several events of United Nations week here in Brevard were readied by the group above. This is the 25th anniversary of United Nations. Discussing the events above are Rev. Orion N. Hutchinson, Jr., pastor of the First United Methodist church, and temporary chaplain of Brevard college, Mrs. E. K. McLarty, chairman of the local UN committee, and Mrs. S. V. Chapnerker, in charge of the International covered dish supper, which was scheduled for October 17th. Mr. Hutchinson was in charge of the Community - College convocation on October 19th.

U. N. Convocation Held October 19

By Mark Todd

The convocation on October 19, planned in conjunction with the 25th anniversary of the United Nations, featured three speakers from Western Carolina University, who offered varied viewpoints on what the U.N. has done to date and the prospects for the future.

After a short concert by the Brevard High School Band, Mrs. E. K. McLarty, Chairman of the Brevard United Nations Committee, and acting chaplain Orion Hutchinson, were presented with a distinguished service award for their work with the United Nations.

The first of the three speakers was Andrew H. Baggs, Assistant Professor of Political Science at WCU. He stated that he feels the U.N. has been a failure for the most part, and attempted to show how the United Nations has failed to prevent the U.S. from seriously considering the use of the atomic bomb in three instances since World War II.

He pondered the U.N.'s 25 years of existence and asked the question, "Will there be another 25 years?" He also stated that it appears the world is becoming more blasé about the use of the bomb with each crisis that arises, and that "nobody cares about the rest of the world."

The next speaker, W. Leon Snow, President of CIRUNA at

WCU, preferred to take a hopeful stance, and to look to the good things that the U. N. has done. Snow suggested that the U.N.'s goal be shifted to an all out attack on the conditions that cause our wars, or to "attack problems, but not going to the extremes to maintain lofty goals." He concluded with the well placed statement, "Let us wage peace as fiercely as we wage war."

The final speaker, Denise Schickle, Representative of the National Student Leaders Institute at Western Carolina, seconded Snow's statement that we need to learn our problems so as to know more realistically how they can be solved. She stated "We as individuals must take action, or else face the reality of there not being another 25 years for the world," as Baggs suggested.

Halloween Dinner

The Saturday night meal in the cafeteria will be a special halloween dinner. Students are encouraged to dress in halloween costumes for the affair. In making the announcement, Mrs. Mary Cox, director of the cafeteria, stated that it is not required to dress in costumes; however, it is felt that to do so would be to the advantage of the students in producing a real halloween feeling.

Dialogue Dinners Are Scheduled Weekly For Rest Of Semester

Monday night, October 26th, the second "Dialogue Dinner" of the year was held in the cafeteria from 5:00 to 6:00 p.m. The dinners are intended to let the students and faculty get to know each other better, ask questions, and learn more about the people that are teaching them.

Plans are to continue the dinners each week if enough interest is shown. The speaker on October 26th was Mr. E. W. Hardin, acting chairman of the Division of Social Studies and Religion. The speaker for the first dinner was Mr. James Jackson, instructor in history. To date the programs have proved interesting, and it is hoped that more students will participate in the future, perhaps enabling the dinners to realize a very valuable potential for development of student-faculty relations.

The dinners are one of the several projects that the Christian Council is sponsoring this year, under the direction of Paul Sims, President, and acting advisor Rev. Orion Hutchinson.

The schedule for the remainder of the semester is as follows: Nov. 1, Mr. Sinclair; Nov. 8, Mrs. Beard; Nov. 16, Mr. Roberts; Nov. 23, Mr. Holcombe; Nov. 30, Mr. Murray; and December 7, Mr. Poe.

State Dept. Representative To Visit Brevard Campus

On November 4, 1970, Mr. Richard Kilpatrick, Public Affairs Officer of the State Department's Bureau of East Asian and Pacific Affairs, will be on the Brevard Campus to defend the government's policy in Southeastern Asia. Mr. Kilpatrick will speak to the student body in assembly at 10:00 a. m. to which the public is cordially invited. After assembly Mr. Kilpatrick will speak to various history classes and small groups, including an informal question and answer session to be held in the cafeteria from 12 noon to 1:00 p. m.

Mr. Kilpatrick will also visit S. Department of State in 1958 as an Administrative Assistant. He was assigned in 1960 to the Foreign Service Institute's Field language and area studies. He stayed in Tokyo at the U. S. Embassy as a Consular Officer and later became staff aide to the American Ambassador. In 1964 Mr. Kilpatrick transferred to U. S. Consulate General in Kobe - Osaka as a Political Officer. His most recent overseas tour of duty was as political adviser to the Department of the Army in Naha, Okinawa. For the academic year in 1967 - 68, Mr. Kilpatrick completed East Asian area studies at Columbia University in New York.

Mr. Kilpatrick will also visit Spartanburg Junior College, Montreat - Anderson College, and Lees - McRae College during his trip to the south.

Business Department Head, Mrs. Munro, Finding Sabbatical Leave Rewarding

Last spring, Mrs. Grace J. Munro, Head of the business department of Brevard College, submitted plans at the request of President Robert A. Davis for her sabbatical, to be taken in the fall of 1970, to Grady Whicker, academic dean of the college.

The plans, which were approved by the dean, were as follows:

"In order to compare our business program with those of other institutions, I plan to visit both junior and senior colleges. I hope to be able to talk with students, faculty, and administrators and to observe some classes.

My main interest, however, is to find out just what industry expects of its secretaries. Thus, I plan to talk with secretaries, personnel directors, and supervisors. Learning firsthand the major strengths and weaknesses of the "average" secretary should help us strengthen our department.

Also, I hope to observe ways in which other business departments are serving their local communities."

According to Mrs. Munro, the sabbatical is even more rewarding than she had dreamed it would be. Whether she is in a one-man office, the State Capitol in Raleigh, a large industry, a high school, or a college, she receives the undivided attention of those with whom she is talking; and many people in industry are impressed with the fact that she is spending her sabbatical trying to find ways to serve them better. "Why, that is what we have needed for years," said an official in one of the local firms. "If education and industry can get together, we'll be moving in the right direction," said another.

In Mrs. Munro's interviews she has three basic questions. To the high school student, she poses the question, "What do you want from college?"; to the college, she asks, "Is our program in line with yours so that our students can readily transfer?" Of industry, she queries, "How can we better serve you?"

"It is very gratifying," said Mrs. Munro, "to hear in a person-to-person situation what we've known all along — that our program is acceptable to most senior colleges."

Since the majority of the secretarial majors are terminal students, Mrs. Munro is especially interested in what industry, including the secretaries themselves, has to say. "No matter where I turn," she said, "the conversation is always the same — the need for loyalty, maturity, a businesslike atti-
