

Davis Seeks To Clarify Off-Campus Regulations

By Mike Jones

A group of students met in Sims Student Center with President Robert Davis, Monday in an attempt to ascertain the administration's policy in regard to off-campus behavior. The policy came into question following a Feb. 12 incident, in which several girls were reprimanded for signing out to a Brevard motel room. Also in question was a party held on Feb. 19 at the Brevard American Legion.

President Davis stated that he was not happy with the things that occurred and that a number of college regulations had been broken. He also added that the events warranted reprimand which, in his opinion, was light for such irresponsible actions. The girls had properly signed out to a motel room, according to President Davis, but they had not notified their parents of this action.

The students maintained that the situation had been handled poorly by the administration in that the girls had not been properly informed of the rules of the sign-out procedure. "Girls were told to sign out to a motel if they were going to a motel," said one co-ed. Many students expressed their belief that what they do off campus is their own business.

Concerning the off-campus party, President Davis said he did not know if it was a college-related function or a private party. He added that all college-related activities should uphold the character and reputation of Brevard College and its students. "We want students to be honest, discreet, and responsible," stated President Davis.

Students will be notified when the new off-campus policies are drawn up, according to President Davis, and they will be informed of exactly what they can and cannot do.

President Davis Accepts Honors For United Fund Work

Dr. Robert A. Davis, President of Brevard College, was recently honored for his outstanding service to the town of Brevard and Transylvania County by accepting for the local United Fund Association the 1970 North Carolina Award for outstanding achievement in fund raising goals. The award was for the Brevard category of population. In the overall category, the local association tied for first place with Gaston County.

As 1970 President of the Association, Dr. Davis led the group to the realization of a tremendous gain over 1969. Also, the 1970 campaign saw the Transylvania United Fund go twelve per cent over its planned goal. The association is reported to have raised more money in a shorter period of time than in its entire history.

All of this is an outstanding tribute to the man who leads Brevard College. Despite pressing duties with college oriented activities here and around the state, it is remarkable that Dr. Davis has been so valuable to the community in his short years of residence here.

Methodist Ministers Meet On Campus

Thirty-seven ministers, who are members of the Western North Carolina Annual Conference of the United Methodist Church, visited Brevard's campus Monday evening. It is customary for the ministers to visit all the institutions supported by the Methodist Church before they receive full membership in the conference.

The group was led by the Reverend Gene H. Little, and they met an hour with a group of students plus another hour with a group of teachers.

12th Plyler Religious Emphasis Week Is To Be Held March 7-11

Final planning is now underway for the 12th annual Plyler Religious Emphasis week on the College campus. The series of programs will be held March 7-11.

On the campus to lead the activities will be the Reverend Reginald Smith, Jr., the preacher and resource leader for the week. Mr. Smith is an alumnus of Brevard College, Southern Methodist University, and received his B.D. degree from Emory University.

He is now pastor of Plains United Methodist Church, Canton, N. C., and prior to his latest position he was campus minister at Appalachian State University.

He has written two books, of which the latest is, A CAMPUS PULSE BEATS.

The week will begin Monday night, March 7, with the monthly convocation. Mr. Smith will be the guest speaker, and will deal with the topic, "What Is Being Said in This Place?"

Tuesday night a lecture and dialogue will be held, based on the subject, "Responsibility in the Face of Freedom." Both of the first two events will be at 6:30 p.m.

On Wednesday during the 10:00 a.m. assembly period another lecture and dialogue will be held entitled "Relationships in the Face of Fragmentation." This will be followed by dialogue in the dorms and a movie at 6:30 p.m.

On Thursday, March 11, the week's activities will be concluded with a panel discussion moderated by Mr. Smith and consisting of a panel of students and faculty at 6:30, followed by a communion - communication - commitment service on campus at 9:30 p.m.

The Religious Emphasis Week is sponsored by the Christian Council. It was initiated in 1959 when the widow of the late Dr. A. W. Plyler, an outstanding leader of the Methodist Church in Western North Carolina and College Trustee, established The Plyler Religious Emphasis Fund.

Changes Are Planned At Brevard College

There are several changes being discussed by the College Administration for the betterment and the beautification of the Brevard College campus. They are scheduled to take place in the next four to six months.

The road directly behind Taylor Hall will be blocked off at the highway and the entrance from the highway to the Student Union will handle all traffic at that end of the campus.

This is for increased safety because of the traffic lights and to clean and dress that corner of the campus.

A new entrance ramp to the Taylor - Green parking lot may then be built and the lot itself would be paved depending on the amount of funds available at that time.

The old Classroom building is scheduled to be torn down in the next few months and in time a new dorm may be erected on that spot.

A bell tower could be built on the space if the Alumni of Weaver College reach the price of construction which is $60,000. A bell tower might alleviate the need for alarm clocks in the men's dorms nearby, but the occupants of Taylor Hall would probably prefer a new dorm.

APPEARING HERE TONIGHT, The Rosewood Rebellion will present an exciting contemporary sound, light show as part of the 1970 - 71 Mutual Concert Association program.

Jamz Dutton, Rosewood Rebellion To Present Sound - Light Show

Jamz Dutton and his Rosewood Rebellion, the electric new marimba group that plays thirty-nine different instruments and uses an electronic F A S O R, will appear at Dunham Music Center on Friday, Feb. 26, at 8:15 p. m. The appearance is sponsored by the Mutual Concert Association program of the 1970-71 series, at Brevard College.

According to Dutton, the FASOR (which stands for Frequency Activated Sonic Ocular Realiser) is a device that translates sounds into electric light signals. The tones and subtle overtones of the group's instruments become intricately-dancing hues of color on the ten-by-thirty-foot translucent screen behind the group. The FASOR was designed and built for the Rosewood Rebellion by an engineer, a painter, and a sculptor.

An appearance by the Rosewood Rebellion is a zip from pop to rock, and from bossa nova to Bach. The audience experiences a swirling splurge of evocative sounds, exploding vibrations, and weird, sometimes eerie flashes of colored lights that strike here in an electric bolt and there is an incandescent glow. The scene is exuberant and the mood is optimistic and bold.

The exotic instruments of the percussion family are combined with the art and computer technology of the 1970's to provide a thoroughly-stimulating and enjoyable evening for every audience the Rosewood Rebellion entertains.

St. Timothy Church To Hear Bishop Earl G. Hunt, Jr.

Bishop Earl G. Hunt, Jr., resident bishop of the Charlotte Area of the Methodist Church, will visit locally on Sunday, Feb. 28, and will preach at St. Timothy United Methodist Church during the morning worship service at eleven o'clock.

At the time of his election to the episcopacy in 1964, Bishop Hunt was president of Emory and Henry College, a position he had held for several years. As a member of the Holston Conference of the Methodist Church, he had served churches in Chatanooga and Morristown Tennessee. Since becoming bishop, he has presided over the Western North Carolina Conference.

St. Timothy Church is located in North Brevard, a mile from the campus of Brevard College on the Asheville Highway. The congregation extends a cordial invitation to the college community - administration, faculty, and student body - to worship there in this special service.
