Brevard receives grant

Grants totaling more than $47,300.00 will be distributed to 42 privately supported colleges and universities in N. C. this week by The Sears-Roebuck Foundation, a spokesman said today.

In the Brevard area, Brevard College will receive grants totaling $750.00.

The North Carolina colleges and universities are among more than 1,000 private, accredited two and four-year institutions across the country which are sharing in $1,500,000 in Sears Foundation funds.

Nationally, private colleges and universities will receive $1,000,000 in unrestricted grants and an additional $500,000 through a Sears Foundation program to assist college and university libraries.

The unrestricted funds may be used as the colleges and universities deem necessary. The library grant program is designed to supplement the normal book acquisition budgets of the participating institutions.

In addition to its unrestricted and college library grant programs, The Sears Foundation during the current year will invest slightly more than $500,000 in various student financial aid and other education programs, the spokesman said. This will bring the higher education expenditures of The Sears - Roebuck Foundation to more than $2,000,000 in 1971.

"Brevard College is most grateful for this support from the Sears - Roebuck Foundation," stated Dr. Robert A. Davis, President of Brevard. "Support from business and industry enables the independent colleges and universities to continue their educational service to our state and nation. This gift from the Sears - Roebuck Foundation will be especially helpful in strengthening and expanding the work of our library."

N. Y. U. surveys students on protest and drugs

Buffalo, N. Y. — (I.P.) — While students, faculty and administrative staff personnel of the State University of New York at Buffalo are favorable to change and innovation, most are moderate in their outlook on major campus issues.

A preliminary analysis of a University-wide survey conducted during a three month period last Spring by the University's Survey Research Center yielded the general finding.

Consisting of nearly 60 questions concerning 13 key areas of University issues, the Survey was intended to provide University decision makers with accurate information for consideration in formulation of policies.

Most members of the University community disagreed with the use of extreme tactics in campus protest, while supporting a "tough stance" against the use and distribution of hard drugs.

Only two protest tactics were favored by the majority of the students: the use of petitions and protest rallies. Picketing and boycotting were viewed in a "mildly positive manner," while building takeovers, disruption of classes and meetings, and destruction of property drew highly negative responses from most students interviewed.

The faculty similarly viewed petitions and rallies as the only favorable tactics, while administrators supported only the use of petitions.

The most significant cause of involvement in protest activities was reaction to administrative actions such as calling in the police. While the students did not view any administrative response to protest favorably, the least unfavorable was the suggestion that the administration warn students involved in disturbances that they face internal discipline.

Students generally blamed "outside influences" for the problems of drugs, theft and vandalism. To solve the problem, 20 percent of the faculty, 22.1 per cent of students and 33 per cent of the administration supported a policy of excluding outsiders. Twenty-five per cent of students favored use of student security guards.

All three groups favored strict law enforcement by all pertinent agencies, including the courts and the University, with regard to hard drugs on campus. A majority of faculty, students and staff also favored University - supported programs such as a drug crisis center, a community - wide drug attack, more research, the expansion of existing drug programs and the arrest of pushers.

On the issue of soft drugs, however, attitudes diverge. Students favored a drug crisis center, educational programs, research on workable drug approaches and expansion of existing drug programs in the metropolitan Buffalo area. They agree with a majority of the faculty in opposing stricter enforcement of laws dealing with soft drugs.

Faculty are neutral on a soft drug crisis center and on the arrest of soft drug pushers. Administrators reject the idea of a soft drug crisis center; on all the other options offered on the subject, they are neutral or slightly in favor.

The random sample of the University community used for the survey included 300 students, 100 faculty members and 100 staff participants.
