Munro Attends Seminar

Mrs. Grace Munro, Professor of Business at Brevard joined approximately 150 other business educators at the University of North Carolina, Greensboro on Saturday, September 23, for a Business Education Seminar.

Dr. Leonard J. West, Professor of Education, Baruch College of The City University of New York, was the main speaker for the event. In his dynamic presentation, Dr. West, a well-known author and lecturer, challenged his audience, all of whom were business teachers, to prepare their students for real life. "School instruction is drowning in fiction," he said: "We must teach our students to make decisions."

When discussing typewriting, which is his specialty, Dr. West emphasized quality work and the amount of time it takes to produce this work. "Typing is done with the head, not just the hands," he said; "and if a student can't think, he can't type." He explained that much of typing time goes into planning the work and correcting errors, which explains why the average production rate is only about one-half of the straight-copy rate.

The seminar was hosted by the Department of Business and Distributive Education, UNC-G, with Professor George Grill presiding.

Mountaineering Club Forms

On Tuesday, September 26, the Brevard College Mountaineering Club held an organizational meeting. Prospective members were told that the objectives of the club were to unite outdoor enthusiasts, to help build outdoor skills, to gain an awareness of the environment around us, to learn how to preserve and care for the outdoor environment, and to simply have fun in the outdoors.

Planned activities for the club include one to two weekend trips monthly, day hikes, backpacking and rock climbing seminars at the College, trail maintenance trips, and a big trip over the latter part of Christmas break.

Other suggestions for activities were asked for.

Sunday Enthralls Crowd

It was the second production of Brevard College's Culture and Life Series and Carole Sunday was the star. She played inviting music on her guitar and sang songs that contained such moving and profound lyrics that one found it impossible not to respond.

Ms. Sunday has been playing the guitar for 12 years and she is now playing regularly at "Dante's Down The Hatch" in Atlanta's Underground. She has done a great deal of recording but she adds that nothing great has happened.

What goal has she set for herself? Ms. Sunday states that she wants to play the harp well enough to perform for a major audience.

Asked what music she preferred most, Ms. Sunday replied the blues. She also said that she is very concerned about the lyrics in her music, and that she has done some of her own lyrics but doesn't consider herself a writer.

Ms. Sunday expresses her gratitude to the Brevard College students in attendance of her concert.

"Everyone was so attentive; it was the best audience I've ever had."

Blood Drive Pulsating Success

The annual Brevard College Blood Drive was held last Wednesday in Boshamer Gymnasium. Many students and residents of the Brevard Community donated, making it a very successful drive. Volunteers from the Transylvania Chapter of the Red Cross lent a helping hand, along with the Big Sisters, who sponsored the drive.

Lisa Craver, head of the Big Sisters, reported that of the 118 people who participated, 96 pints were collected; 26 people were denied for health reasons. The response was greater than last year, when only 76 pints were given.

The Bloodmobile announced its arrival a week earlier than expected, leaving the Big Sisters little time to recruit donors. "I felt we could have gotten more if we had more time," commented Lisa, "but I was pleased with the overall outcome and participation of the students." Lisa also added a personal thanks to those who gave their time and effort towards the drive.

Brevard Security Cracks Down

Brevard College's new Director of Security is Mr. Richard E. O'Hara, a retired officer of the U. S. Armed Services.

O'Hara and two other officers make up the Security Department at Brevard College, and they all take their jobs very seriously.

"Parking is our biggest problem so far," stated O'Hara "and it should be noted that over 300 warning tickets have been issued to date, while 85 tickets for fines have been written. Parking on campus is a privilege and should be treated as such. Space is very limited for convenience parking, such as driving from your dorm to class, or to eat at the cafeteria. We are now giving tickets to those who park in front of the cafeteria, because that space is being used by townspeople who use the building for various reasons."

Brevard Welcomes Jacobsen

A new addition to the Brevard College Community is Mr. John Jacobsen of Sarasota Springs, New York. Mr. Jacobsen will be at Brevard for one year, completing his internship in music to earn his administrative certificate; he now works in the Fine Arts Department. He is on leave from his position of Director of Bands at Sarasota Springs Junior and Senior High Schools, where he has been since 1969.

Mr. Jacobsen's chief interest is the trombone, and he has played in back up orchestras for such celebrities as Bob Hope, Glen Campbell, Liberace, Bobby Vinton, Gladys Knight, Tom Jones, and Barry Manilow. He received his Bachelor's degree from Hofstra University, and did post graduate work at the State University of New York at Albany.

O'Hara and officers Collins and Laughter (pronounced louder) have also made an attempt at cracking down on the amount of alcohol and drugs consumed on campus. He quoted from page 98 of the College Handbook: "Brevard College does not sanction the use of alcohol or other illegal drugs." "We have already disposed of several cases of beer and full bottles of wine, whiskey and gin," stated O'Hara, "and alcoholic beverages in any form or quantity including empties in possession will be removed by security and your names will be turned over to the Dean of Students, Dean Houk."

If anyone has any questions about rules, regulations, or campus security, officer O'Hara is available daily from 2:00 until 5:00 p.m. in Room 107 McLarty-Goodson. "Suggestions are always welcome and could prove useful in our campus community."

Mr. Jacobsen is married and has two children and lives in a campus duplex.
