Trustees Consider New Student Housing

by Jon Zillioux

A committee of the Brevard College Board of Trustees is currently considering a plan for additional student housing, possibly to be constructed this summer, revealed Dr. Morris Wray, Dean of the college, late last week.

Since the concept of the new housing is currently in the proposal stage and slated for full bound discussion in late April, no construction bids have been solicited and no final design plan has been reached.

According to Dr. Wray, existing dorms provide for only 600 students while 800 currently attend Brevard. "We'd like to close the gap," stated Dean Wray.

Funding for the project will not likely come from private sources. "Federal money is just not available to us," stated Mr. Frank Davis, Director of Development and spokesman for Brevard College.

According to a memo Mr. Davis provided the Clarion,

"Costs will ultimately be paid by fees received from the students who actually live there. This is a standard method for financing student housing, and will not affect any other areas of the college's operational budget," added Mr. Davis, "It'll be its own package within the budget."

Dean Wray pointed out that a student may pay roughly and additional $25 to boarding fees to live in the new complex.

According to a college official, applications for these new apartments will be distributed in the near future "because the concept may well be approved (and) if we wait until after the plan's approval in early May, it will be to late for (rising) sophomores to sign up to live there." The first apartments built will be available to males only, however.

The construction site has been set in the area between the Roses Department store and the faculty duplexes. According to Dean

Wray, each housing complex will consist of four separate apartments-two on two floors; each apartment will house six students.

According to the tentative design plan, each apartment will have three bedrooms, two bathrooms, a kitchen and dining area, and a living room, proposed by Mr. Bob Daniels, area architect.

"Over a period of time, we plan to build a total of four complexes," stated Dr. Wray.

Bernard (standing, and played by Kyle Geneway) has his hands full as Jacqueline (standing and played by Dee Smith) meets Judith (Robin Ashe). Bernard's friend Robert (Lee Brown) is trapped in the middle during a scene of "Boeing-Boeing."

Spring Drama

BOEING-BOEING

As a part of the Life and Cultural Series, Brevard College Professor Sam Cope presents the spring production of the college drama department, BOEING-BOEING by Marc Camoletti on April 1, 2, & 3 at 8:15 p.m. in the Barn Theatre on the Brevard campus.

The play follows the misadventures of a young bachelor, Bernard, who carries on three simultaneous romances with three different airline stewardesses, one with Air France, one with Luftansa and one with TWA. Everything is under control and rather pleasant for Bernard until the airlines change their flight schedules and Bernard's "friends" all end up in the same city at the same time with him. The confusion leads to hilarious situations and Barnard's friend, Robert, who is visiting from the country, not only learns a great deal about life in the city, but becomes involved in Bernard's problems himself. Throughout the play Bernard's housekeeper, Bertha, tries to keep up with the ever changing situation.

The cast of the production includes the following characters: Barnard, a young bachelor-Kyle Genaway; Robert, Bernard's friend-Len Brown; Bertha, Bernard's housekeeper-Victoria Rives; The three fiancées: Jacqueline, Air France-Dee Smith; Judith, Luftansa-Robin Ashe; Janet, TWA-Pam Brittingham.

Tickets are available at the Receptionist's desk in the Administration Building from 8:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. Advanced reservations must be made.

ROTC To Begin

by Lisa Atkins

As a result of long-time planning in conjunction with Furman University and the Army, Brevard College will be offering an ROTC program beginning next fall. Brad Walters' father, the Asst. Sec. of the Army, offered to assist in starting such a program at Brevard, and according to Dean Wray, the possibility was discussed with President Martinson. Plans are "still tentative, however, subject to establishment by the Board of Trustees." Several years ago Brevard asked the Army about the possibility but they weren't interested. "As a result," Dean Wray stated, "Furman University approached us asking about the possibility of running a cross-enrollment program between Furman and Brevard College."

The program will consist of two levels, a basic and advanced program. The basic program will be offered at Brevard. Two more courses, World Military History and National Defense Policy, each worth three elective hours, will be open to any student. A leadership lab will also be offered to those actually enrolled in the program. No military obligation exists during the first two years, but for those who enroll in the Advanced Level, up to $1000 a year is involved and there is an obligation.

According to Dean Wray, no scholarship options will be available during the first two years except for those who qualify for the Advanced Program. To qualify, a student must have been enrolled in High School ROTC for a specified amount of time, or attend an ROTC summer camp.

Pre-registration Deposits Refundable

by Jon Zillioux

Contrary to previous notice, deposits which continuing students are required to make before the upcoming preregistration will be refundable.

This move was made by Dean Wray to prevent students from losing deposits ($50 for boarding; $15 for day, in these financially tight times should one decide to attend college elsewhere. "This way a student won't lose his money which he may need elsewhere," the Dean stated.

Deposits should be posted to the Office of Financial Affairs before preregistration forms are received and before rooms can be reserved.

Deposits will be refundable until August 1, 1982.

B.C. Choir To Tour Charleston

by Regina Wortman

The Brevard College Collegiate Singers and Chamber Choir will go on a tour to Charleston, S.C. on April 4-6 to sing at various churches and schools. The groups will stop in Greenville, S.C. on their way to perform at Rocky Creek Baptist Church during the morning worship service. Sunday night the singers will present a performance at the First Baptist church of Charleston. At 12:00 p.m. Monday, the group will sing at St. Philips Episcopal Church, the oldest church in Charleston. After singing at St. Philips, the choirs will perform at Bishop England High School. The Collegiate Singers and Chamber Choir will present their last performance at 12:00 p.m. Tuesday, an outdoor performance at the College of Charleston.

Some of the selections which will be presented are "Charlottesville," "Ecce quomodo Moritur," "Stomp Your Foot," "Every Time I Feel The Spirit," "Direct Us O Lord," "Rhythm of Life," and "Geographical Fugue." The selections the Chamber Choir will perform will include "Flower of Beauty," "Great Day," "Sing to the Lord," "All My Trials," and "Saul."

While in Charleston, the two groups will be staying on Folly Beach in beach houses that belong to the First Baptist Church of Charleston. The Choirs plan to spend one afternoon relaxing on the beach. If there is enough time, the singers will visit an old slave market that has a variety of shops and gourmetisserie. The two groups will return on the evening of April 6. Both the collegiate Singers and Chamber Choir are directed by Professor Lee Bratton.
