Dean Wray Becomes Andrew College President

by Kim Ormand

Dr. Morris G. Wray, former Dean of Brevard College, has been appointed President of Andrew College in Cuthbert, Georgia, beginning December 1st, 1985.

Wray will succeed Dr. Billy Greer, Andrew's 17th president, who is now the President of Brevard College. Wray's appointment came after a fifteen week search by a selection committee under the direction of Elizabeth Ogie, chairwoman of the board.

Prior to his position as the dean of Brevard College, Wray was Dean of Admissions at Andrew College. During that time, Andrew experienced a 220 percent enrollment increase and received national recognition from the Division of Higher Education of the United Methodist Church for its accomplishment.

Wray was the Associate Dean of Student Life at the college of William and Mary in Williamsburg, Virginia from 1973 to 1979. From 1970 to 1973, he was Director of Unclassified Studies and Head Counselor for the freshman class at Vanderbilt University in Nashville, Tennessee.

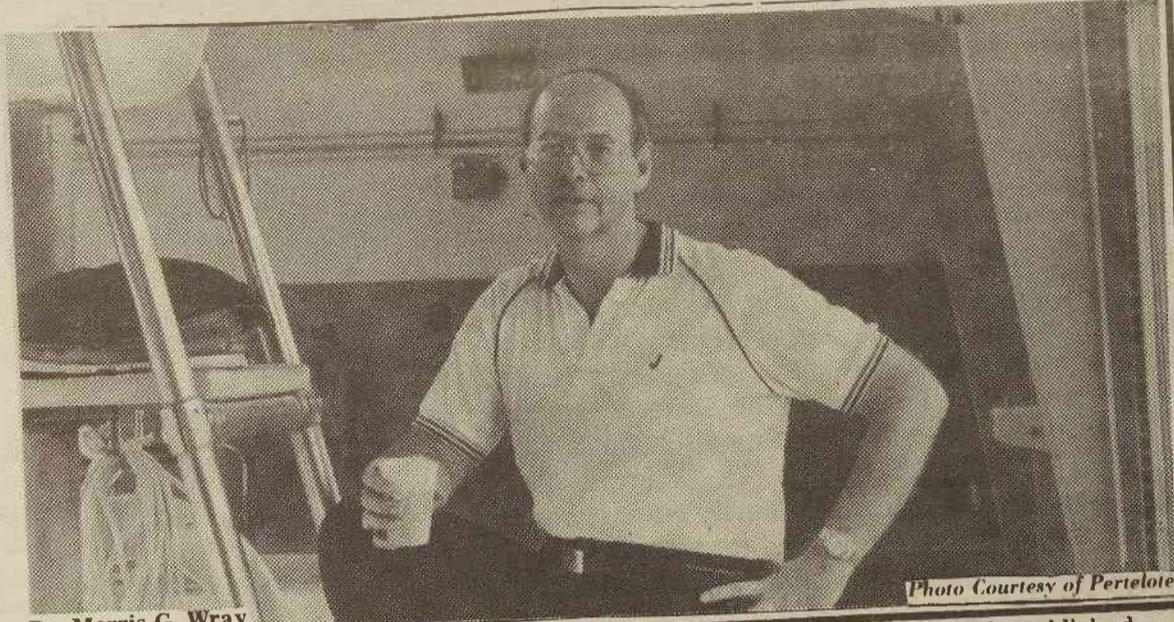

An ordained minister and member of the Methodist Church, Wray received his doctorate and Master of Arts degree from Vanderbilt University. He holds a Master of Divinity degree from Southeastern Seminary in Wake Forest and a Bachelor of Arts degree from Mars Hill College, Mars Hill, North Carolina.

Brevard underwent many changes during Wray's tenure here at B.C. The college set enrollment records and produced model programs for student orientation, placement, advising, and retention of students. A residence hall was built, a resident tutors program implemented, and a computer center valued at over $1 million was incorporated.

Yet Dr. Wray accomplished much more than all of that, especially in the form of friends at B.C. Dr. Greer says that "he already misses him." They were backyard neighbors; dropping in on each other and visiting all of the time. Students also showed their feelings concerning his departure. Marta Cedeno, sophomore said, "It's bad because a lot of people were influenced by Dean Wray." Yet, sophomore Robin Barret thinks "it's good for him because he's always wanted to be on top and now he is," yet bad because he was "always there for everybody."

Although it will be hard to fill Dr. Wray's position, the title of Dean is most sought after. Even though the position has yet to be advertised in the necessary journals, applicants have already begun inquiring.

Does BC Have a Fair Judicial System?

by Heather Kivett

Does Brevard College have an accessible, fair judicial system? To decide this, the structure of it must be reviewed. The judicial system consists of the Judicial Board, the Committee on Continuation, the Judicial Review Board, and the President of the college.

The Judicial Board is composed of the RT's, the vice-president of each dorm, vice-president of day students, and the vice-president of the Student Government Association. J-Board is an appellate for sanctions from RT's, faculty, or staff. It also takes cases of original jurisdiction. Original jurisdiction occurs when there is no precedent in the case, and the J-Board must decide what uniform guideline was broken and then decide guilt or innocence.

The committee on Continuation is the next step in the appellate process. It consists of faculty, the president of the RA's and SGA vice-president. It is an appellate for the decisions by J-Board, the Dean of Student Affairs, and the Dean of the College.

It can also deal with original jurisdiction and hears all cases on school destruction.

The Judicial Review Board is an appellate for decisions from the Committee of Continuations. It is composed of the Dean of the College, the Dean of Student Affairs, and three faculty members appointed for the appeal by the Dean of the College. The final appeal is to the President of the College.

Most trials before a judicial board are private, but a student can request (in advance) that observers be allowed at the hearing. This request can be denied by the Chairman of the Board. The reason that most trials are private is because they deal with personal matters of the student and should not be publicized.

Most students do not realize all the different appeals that are available to them. Brevard has a good judicial system because it does offer many chances of appeal. In cases that clearly show an infraction of the Uniform Guidelines, it is unlikely that a lesser penalty will be given. In cases of original jurisdiction there is more leeway to decide a penalty since it is the first time it has come up.

The system's major flaw is the inability of the boards to make pertinent decisions. Basically, they are tied to the rules and regulations set in the Guidelines. The appellate boards need more power to make good decisions and not have to follow the black and white. They need to be able to explore gray areas and treat each case with more humanity and justice than is now possible.

Phonathon Was Huge Success

by Ramona Carpio

The phonathon, under the leadership of John Lefler, Director of Institutional Advancement and Sally Gunther, Assistant Director of Institutional Advancement, was a sensational success.

The phonathon was held November 4th through November 25th. For nine nights, phonathon volunteers sat for hours calling alumni all over the U.S. In the beginning, volunteers were very scared and tense about making that first call. Yet, after a few calls the phonathon members gained confidence in themselves and acquired excellent salesmanship.

Financial Aid Available

The Financial Aid Office will distribute the new 1986-87 FAF forms to all First Year students who received financial aid based on need this year through their P.O. boxes in the Student Union. All others, first and second year students, may pick up the new forms at the Financial Aid Office in Beam Administration Building.

Financial Aid Administrator Ed Cunningham urges all students who plan to file for financial aid for 1986-87 to be sure to secure the new forms before leaving for the Christmas break and to take all forms home so that both the student and parent(s) can start the process.

The new FAF cannot be filed before January 1st, 1986, and Cunningham stressed that the income information should be from completed 1985 U.S. Income Tax Returns if at all possible. The earlier one can file the FAF with College Scholarship Service in Princeton, N.J., the better the chances are of receiving aid. The forms may be used for most all colleges and universities.

Financial Aid funds ARE NOT LIMITED, so be sure to do your part early, so you will not be disappointed. Both Mr. Cunningham and his assistant, Mrs. Masterson, are available to assist in any way they can. Be sure to get your new FAF form if you want to receive aid.
