

And you thought he was in prison? Nope. Jimmy and Tammy Faye (Dino Locklear and Kathleen Hermans) came to the BC Halloween dance along with Jessica Hahn (Lois Hicks) hanging on the televangelist's shoulder.

BC inducts two into Hall of Fame

Two outstanding alumni were inducted into the Brevard College Hall of Fame at Brevard College's annual Homecoming weekend, Oct. 13-15.

Bishop Ole E. Borgen of Norway and the late Dr. A. Mitchell Faulkner of Charlotte were honored for outstanding personal achievement and service bringing honor and respect to Brevard College.

With his wife, Martha, and his daughter May-Britt (BC '89) watching, Bishop Borgen told the gathering of his first day at Brevard College: "completely lost, completely exhausted after two and half days of non-stop bus travel, and the minute I got here they decided to have a dorm meeting," Bishop Borgen said with a smile. "And all those folks spoke Southern — which I didn't understand."

Then, "This college has changed my whole life," Borgen said. "This little college gave me just as good an education as those big places which charged ten times as much.

"This place changed my life in my career direction, too. I made the decision here to go into the ministry — instead of meats and sausages — before, I was going to take over my father's business," Bishop Borgen concluded: "I cherish my memories here."

Borgen now lives and teaches at Asbury Theological Seminary in Wilmore, Ky.

In making the posthumous presentation, BC Alumni Association President Stuart Black said, "A. Mitchell Faulkner was loyal in words and action to Brevard College for over 50 years, giving suggestions and advice to the Trustees, but most of all, his prayers and concern for the ongoing of Brevard College. We lost a great friend when Mitch Faulkner left us on January third of this year. He is truly missed."

BC faculty are 'fit to teach'

Brenda Owen
Clarion Reporter

Brevard College has started a fitness program for faculty, staff and administration members called the "BC Be Fit" program.

Already 98 percent are participating in the optional program, designed to encourage and educate the Brevard College faculty, staff, and administration toward having healthier lives. A one percent bonus is added to their next year's salary if they do participate in the program.

What is required of them in order to receive their bonus? They must perform a weekly aerobic exercise program for at least 30 minutes three times a week all year (Sept. 11-May 4), including holiday breaks. They are only allowed to miss because of sickness, death in the family, or other equally important circumstances; but they still have to make it up, if possible.

Their aerobic exercises can include: walking, swimming, biking, hiking, both roller and ice skating, cross country skiing, aerobic dancing, jogging, and rowing. To keep a record of their exercises, they record their work-outs on logs where they list the date of the activity, the activity, distance and if applicable, time and comments.

Says Sharon Brown, program coordinator, "This program gives the faculty, staff, and administration members an opportunity to come together for something other than teaching or working. Each member had a support person which encourages them to strive harder for the goal which they have set for themselves to do enabling them to spend more valuable time together."

So far, they all seem to be very enthusiastic about the program: only two people are NOT participating. Of the people participating, only a few of them are used to exercising regularly, so this is a big accomplishment for many of the faculty, staff, and administration members, says Brown.

Then there was this fun couple: Burney Mack as something native and Beth Winters with a 'fatal attraction' for a stuffed toy.

Miss BC pageant plans set

by Fred Goble
Clarion Reporter

Confidently, they parade. Gracious, poised, intelligent and talented — not to mention beautiful — these women between the ages of 17 and 26 all want to be Miss Brevard College and represent Brevard College and the Town of Brevard in the 1990 Miss North Carolina Pageant.

Inside the auditorium, a capacity crowd will watch. Not everyone who watches agrees that pageants are desirable — but they watch and encourage each contestant who competes anyway.

Derided by feminists, dismissed as an anachronism by some, the Miss Brevard College Pageant, Miss North Carolina Pageant, and the Miss America Pageant system endures, weathering changing times and tastes each year.

This year's Miss Brevard College Pageant will be held on January 27, 1990 at 8 p.m. in Dunham Music Center. Each contestant will compete in four areas of competition: talent, interview, swimsuit, and evening gown. Forty percent of the competition will be based on talent, and for the first time in the Miss America System, interview will count for 30 percent rather than ten percent in previous years. Swimsuit and evening gown will each count 10 percent.

The Miss America Pageant System offers some of the largest college scholarships for young women in the world. These scholarships begin at the local level like the Miss Brevard College Pageant, which will give more than $3,000 in scholarship money for Brevard College. Not only will this year's winner receive a scholarship, but she will win the right to compete in the 1990 Miss North Carolina Pageant where there she can obtain up to $10,000 in real college scholarship money.

This year's pageant theme is "The Wonderful World of Disney", in which all entertainment will revolve around the productions of Disney. Teresa Lynn Jennewine of Brandon, Fla., the 1989 Miss Brevard College, will be present the entire week of the pageant to turn her crown over to the new Miss Brevard College. Special guests will include the current Miss North Carolina, Kelly Dawn Fletcher, of Hickory, and various Miss America judges from all over the southeastern United States.

The first Miss Brevard College, Terri Jennewine.

(photo by Jared Noe)