Sophomore athletes on the move

As the 1989-90 school year comes to a close, so does the sports season and the careers of many Tornado athletes.

Many of the sophomores will be transferring to other colleges and universities where they plan to continue their athletic careers.

The men's soccer team, coached by Dave Taylor, will have five sophomores transferring. Kurt Lenhart of Franklin, N.C., plans to go to Clemson. Stuart McKenzie of Scotland is looking at Park University, Queens College or possibly a fifth semester at BC.

Also looking at Queens is David Simmers of Orlando, Fla. Simmers says he's also considering Wofford College or Greensboro College. John Hackworth of Dunedin, Fla., may head to Belthany College, Wake Forest or Greensboro College. Eric Rasmussen of Greenville, Ga., is going to Georgia State.

With the men's basketball team go five sophomores, but only three know where they will go. Marcus Allen of Mt. Airy, N.C., will go to Greensboro College. Harvey Cozart of Butner, N.C. is looking at Wyoming, UNC-Charlotte or Eastern Kentucky. Jamie Cousin of Butner is going to Pembroke State University.

The women's basketball team has four sophomores finishing at BC, but none of them plan to continue their basketball careers. Daphanie Bousum of Murphy, N.C., and Katie Trexler of Rockwell, N.C., do not plan to go on to college. (Katie plans to play semi-pro basketball). Both Boo Doby of Decatur, Ga., and Jennifer Burger of Isabella, Tenn., will be going to Western Carolina University.

Coach Dave Rinker is seeing nine of his sophomore runners graduating. Three plan to attend Appalachian State University: Jeff Moran of Christiansburg, Va.; Brad Smith of Longwood, Fla.; and Brian Watkins of Triangle, Va.

Scott Wilkinson of Hendersonville is looking at ASU or UNC-Wilmington. N.C. State will be getting Tom Bernal of Richmond, Va. Curtis Grundler of Woodbridge, Va., is headed to the University of South Alabama.

Georgia Tech is getting two: Jeff Brewer of Orange Park, Fla.; and Shawn Young of Marietta, Ga. Rob Cowles of Jacksonville, Fla., is going to the University of Georgia or Florida State University.

Rob Malsby of Marietta Ga., is the only golfer transferring and planning to play. Malsby is headed to Berry College.

BC brothers and sisters reflect

Making the adjustment from homelife to college life is tough and every on-campus student here at Brevard College has had to make that adjustment. Does having a brother or sister on campus make that home to college move easier?

Leslie Goodwin, a sophomore from Columbia, S.C., whose twin sister Brooks is also a student here at BC says, "Last year we didn't room together so we had to learn to get along with living with somebody else." She adds, "This year we do room together so it's not all that different from being at home."

To sophomore Robin Wicker from Conover, N.C., having his younger brother Dale here, "Always gives me a sense of security. Since we've been here at school, we've shared more than we did at home. Since Mom and Dad aren't here," he continues, "we just have each other."

Sophomore Rick Redmond from Hendersonville, N.C., feels the same sense of security. "What makes me happiest about having Lin here is that we're best friends. It's like having a security blanket." Rick adds, "When I need somebody, she's here."

Rick's sister, Lin, who is also a sophomore, says, their relationship "has gotten better because we've had to cooperate. Enjoying something together has been good."

Dane and Dean Peterson, from Winston-Salem, N.C., like the Goodwin twins, chose to be roommates this year because, according to freshman Dane, "I could get more work done with Dean as a roommate."

Dane and Dean not only share a room but they also share an interest in music. They both play in campus bands; Dane is a drummer for "Weber and Peterson" and Dean is a bassist for "COA".

Even though they share an interest hall and now live south of Brevard in mountains in a place called Bill Rains Mountain.

Murray's wife, Mary, is a potter. Together they own a pottery business and a shop called "Tall Pines." They have had this business since 1980.

They have a son who goes to Appalachian State and will graduate this year. After attending BC, he is now studying hotel management and outdoor recreation. He works in a restaurant and hopes to be a chef in the near future.

This semester Murray is teaching intermediate life drawing, sculpture, as well as teaching once a week at the retirement community of College Walk. He plans to work at Brevard until retirement.

Drawing is what Murray enjoys the most, and this leads to his sculpture work. Drawing is the first main step for all types of art work, he says.

Exhibitions entered Murray's life since he was young. When he was a senior in college he won the North and South College Painting award. He had an exhibition in the Southeast and got to be well known. Murray participated in over 100 exhibitions and contests. He won some but he says just knowing that he was participating satisfied him.

He is excited because of the International Sculpture conference and is going to have a couple of his sculptures in Washington. Now in the "Frie Holm" in Asheville two of his sculptures and a drawing are being exhibited. A piece of his work is traveling throughout the Southeast now and will continue for the next two years. Soon it will be at Queens College in Charlotte with an exhibition called "Tri-State Exhibition" which starts March 1.

Murray presently is working in the Sacred Hearts Catholic Church doing the 14 Stations of the Cross which follows the life of Jesus Christ through crucifixion until his burial. He also is doing the faceted window designs for them.

This is the first year that the new art building has been opened. Murray says, "There is lots of space now." He is also looking forward to the incoming students. Murray also says, "There is a gallery that can have a permanent collection that no one has ever seen."

Murray has enjoyed teaching at Brevard and says he will continue to do so. He looks forward to the new students every semester and will thoroughly enjoy using the art building to its fullest.
