Art Department Expands Faculty

Angie Clark
Art Editor

This year brought some new faces to the art department: Dora Janov, Ray Kaylor, and Molly Doctrow.

Ray Kaylor, who has been teaching at Brevard for two years now, is a part time ceramics teacher. Ray maintains a ceramics studio at home when he's not teaching at the college. He earned his BFA at Western Carolina University, and his MFA in clay from East Carolina University.

Dr. Dora Janov is a resident of Brevard. This semester, she is teaching 2-dimensional design and art appreciation, as a part time instructor. She attended Ball State University where she earned her doctorate degree.

Molly Doctrow came to Brevard from UCLA Northridge. She earned her MFA in Printmaking, and is teaching graphic design, printmaking, and life drawing. She has worked as a designer and illustrator for such companies as Braille Institute and Lockheed. She recently became a full time staff member for the Spring semester of 1996.

All of the faculty will be featured in the faculty art show in Simms art gallery.
