

Students pour flour on Coltrane carpets

by Tom Cowan
News Editor

On Saturday morning Jan. 27, campus security discovered that a large amount of white flour had been dumped on the carpets near the campus life offices of Coltrane Commons. Suspects of the prank were identified later that day when security found flour laden footprints leading to several rooms in Beam.

According to security supervisor, Dan Wood, the mail room in Coltrane was opened at its usual time early Saturday morning when the security guard on duty noticed that one of the doors of the building was left unlocked. It was then discovered that someone had poured a trail of flour on the carpet, which led up the stairwell to the waiting room, where more flour had been poured on the floor outside of the security and Campus Life offices.

According to head of security Stan Jacobsen, the mess had to be cleaned up immediately because prospective students were scheduled to visit the building that day. Jacobsen said Bony Stevenson, supervisor of house keeping, was called in at 6:30 am to vacuum the flour from the carpets.

Security Guard Paula Crooke was instructed by Jacobsen to search the campus for flour residue that could potentially lead to suspects. "It was an easy job" Crook said. She described finding flour marks in the lobby of Beam and "floury footprints" in Beam's hallways, which led to several doors where she began questioning.

According to Jacobsen, Crook was able to obtain a confession from one female student that day. The student claimed to have entered Coltrane early that morning through an unlocked door on the library side of the building. Other individuals believed to be involved in the prank include another female student, one female former student and one male non-student. The students believed to have been involved are being adjudicated by Campus Life.

Art Majors will travel to High Museum in Atlanta

The Art Department is planning a trip to the High Museum in Atlanta, GA on Friday, February 9, 2007. They will be viewing a collection from the Louvre in Paris, including: The Royal's Collection, King's as Collectors, Morris Louis

Now: An America Master revisit4ed, and Romantic Eye: Drawing & Watercolors from the Royal's Collection.

Vans will be leaving from Sims promptly at 7:00 a.m. and will return around 10:00 p.m. Twenty students will be admitted. Those who wish to attend are encouraged to sign up soon. There is a $10 deposit that will cover the entrance fee. Students are responsible for their own meals. Diane Pomphrey, the art department secretary, will be taking deposits until the seats are filled.

High Museum in Atlanta

Weekend Forecast

Friday, Feb 2

Hi 49
Lo 29

AM Clouds / PM
Sun

Saturday, Feb 3

Hi 45
Lo 22

Mostly Cloudy

Sunday, Feb 4

Hi 39
Lo 23

AM Clouds / PM
Sun

Forecast brought to you by Molly Carlson, The Weather Channel and Microsoft Paint.

The Clarion

needs writers, editors and photographers to cover Brevard College events.

Join the newspaper staff. We meet Mondays at 4:00 p.m. in MG 113.