

American Hero

In this week's American Hero, we at The Clarion would like to pay homage to not just one person, but to an entire system, the Brevard College Early Warning System. On Tuesday afternoon around 4 p.m. students received an e-mail informing them that the tornado warning in effect for Transylvania County was over. This was a great piece of information, especially considering that there was no e-mail preceding it informing students that there actually was a tornado warning. For letting us know that we were relieved of the danger we did not know we were in we salute you, Brevard College Early Warning System. (Side note: it should be acknowledged that the real Tornado Warning is still in effect until about 9 p.m. Saturday night, after the end of the BC- UNC-Pembroke football game.)

Sign of the times

It is the role of the church to advise its members in all areas of their lives. This church in Young Harris, Georgia apparently gives thoughtful advice to its parishioners not only in the spiritual realm, but in the social realm as well. Each week The Clarion will run a photo of an amusing sign. If you have one, please submit it to clarion@brevard.edu.
