

CHANGE

photo courtesy J. Padgett

Street vendors cash in on the event by selling Obama merchandise, a fact that led BC Chaplain Shelly Webb to say that

"What I really enjoyed was the fact that not only did he say what he was going to, he gave five points that actually described how he would do it. I kept getting chills when I listened to him."
-BC student Emily Webb

"For me, the Obama rally was my first political rally experience and it was truly memorable. Beautiful day."
-BC chaplain Shelly Webb

photo courtesy J. Padgett

Recent polls show that Obama scores well with younger voters, as evidence by the shot above. The shot below shows that Democrats weren't the only ones who showed up at the Obama rally Sunday.

Photos by M. Newton

photo courtesy J. Padgett

Thousands of people stand in a line over a mile long in hopes of getting to hear Presidential hopeful Barack Obama at Asheville High School Presidential hopeful Barack Obama speaks to a crowd at Asheville High School's Memorial Stadium on Sunday afternoon.

"Seeing all of the people there was amazing, it gave me hope!"
-BC student Sara Daugherty

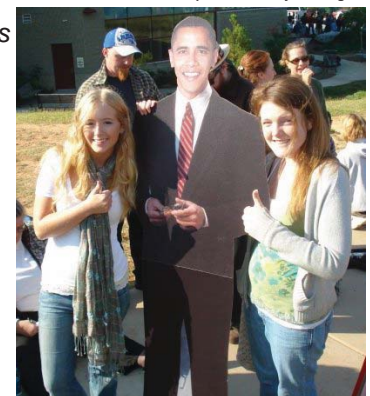

photo courtesy S. Daugherty

Sophomore Sara Daugherty (right) stands with a cutout of Barack Obama.