The Senior Seminar Series, originally designed for upperclassman but beneficial and open to all BC students, will take place on two consecutive Thursdays, April 16 and 23, from 6-8 p.m. in MG 125.

During the first day of Senior Seminar students will be given a very unique opportunity of hearing and learning more about personal finance, paying off students loans and avoiding further debts, the importance of having a solid insurance, and the significance of staying healthy and productive through exercise and right nutrition.

Each of these topics will be more closely elaborated by highly experienced and respected guest speakers, Mike Whitehead, the president of a bank in Raleigh and BC alum, Ray Gill, a local insurance agent and alum, and Amanda Fisher, a certified dietician at Transylvania Regional Hospital.

The second day of Senior Seminar Series will be devoted to the importance of office etiquette, attitude and effective communication, interview skills, resume and cover letter building, networking, and lastly, legal matters.

Again, students will have a chance to hear from professionals in each of these areas. During the second day of series, guest speakers will be BC alum Chris Reinhardt, a lawyer from Asheville, and Sue Curtis, a retired human resources manager.

The Senior Seminar Series is being organized by BC student Sean M. Ferretti, an intern with the office of Institutional Advancement. It is co-sponsored by the BC Business Club.

and Introduction to Backpacking classes participated in their weekend trips.

Students in Rock Climbing 101 were led by instructor Jeremy Whitworth, owner of the Brevard Rock Gym, and teaching assistant Josh Carter to popular local climbing routes at Cedar Rock, Looking Glass Rock, and the boulder-field below the north side of Looking Glass Rock to practice their climbing and belay techniques.

At Looking Glass, student's top-rope climbed the first pitches on the Safari Jive, Sundial and Creatures routes. Student Dan Schreiman had this to say about the trip, "All the routes were sick-gnar. Everyone made it up Safari Jive, but Creatures really stumped us."

Students in the Introduction to Backpacking class were led by instructor Ryan Donovan to Pisgah National Forest where they hiked part of the Daniel Ridge Loop to Farlow Gap and then practiced off-trail navigation on the hike down from Pilot Mountain.

Student Clint Dewitt had this to say about the backpacking trip, "We focused a lot on navigation and the off-trail navigation part of the trip was pretty much amazing."

It seems that students in both classes really enjoyed the experiences they encountered and the challenges they faced during their weekend in the backcountry.
