Are you tired of the basic social networking online sites like Facebook and Myspace? If you are, then there are quite a few alternative sites that you may find interesting enough that you find they war-

Men's golf wins ICI on home course

Grant Carnie (left) and Bret McGaughey (right) tied for second place last weekend at the Independent Collegiate Invitational. Both golfers finished at -2 for in the rain-shortened tournament and helped BC take first place with a team score of +3.

On Monday, the Brevard College men's golf team was able to claim their first team championship of the season, winning the Independent Collegiate Invitational at Etowah Valley Country Club. The Tornados finished the rain shortened event with a team score of three over par 291, three strokes ahead of second placed Barton College.

Junior Grant Carnie and freshman Bret McGaughey led the Tornados with a two under par 70, good enough to tie for second place. The combo finished one stroke behind medalist Rylan Lanham of Western Carolina.

En route to taking second place in the tournament, the Tornados out-shot five South Atlantic Conference foes. These five teams along with the Tornados return to Etowah Valley next Monday and Tuesday to take part in the SAC Tournament.

Twitter is a new social networking site where members are able to update information and blogs by text messaging. Pictures and other personal information are not a key source to developing the site, so anyone that is worried about being stalked by an unfamiliar face may feel more secure using this site. Any member interested in celebrity gossip will find that Twitter keeps day to day updates on what is going on in Hollywood.

Going.com is another website that social networkers may find beneficial because rather than leaving you to sit on the computer all day browsing profiles, it encourages users to get out and be active. Users are able to list their favorite hangout spots and upcoming events that are taking place in their area.

Once a user has been a member of the site for a while then it automatically begins to send recommendations of places that someone may take interest in going to. Just make sure that it is used responsibly and not to meet complete strangers.

Since there are so many chefs on the Brevard College campus (Editor's note: just not in the cafeteria, apparently), most of the student body will take interest in the site Bakespace. The name is pretty self explanatory. Anyone that loves to cook or bake can become a member and post some of their favorite recipes. So for all the people out there that love to cook and discuss recipes with friends, Bakespace is definitely the site to visit to find new recipes and make new baking partners.
