"Over the years, so much surrounding the college enrollment process and strategy has become a science—it's data driven. But in the end, families still rely quite heavily on 'gut instinct' to make their college decisions. I guess you could say I employed a similar technique and Brevard just felt right. I'm looking forward to working alongside others to do whatever I can to help the College meet its strategic enrollment goals."

Cox comes to Brevard College from Millsaps College, a private liberal arts college in Jackson, Miss., that is supported by the United Methodist Church. While at Millsaps, Cox served as dean of enrollment management and was responsible for all strategic recruitment and enrollment activities. During his tenure, Millsaps experienced significant increases in freshman applications as well as an almost record freshman class.

Prior to his work at Millsaps, Cox served as director of admissions and recruitment at the University of Southern Mississippi in Hattiesburg, where he was responsible for a 15-percent increase in new freshmen.

While at USM, Cox also served as director of recruitment operations and alumni liaison as well as a senior admission counselor and coordinator of orientation and campus events.

Cox earned a master's degree in public administration and a bachelor's degree in political science from the University of Southern Mississippi. He is currently at the dissertation level for his Ph.D. in Higher Education Administration.

He and his wife, Terra, will be moving to Brevard shortly along with their two children.
