AMERICAN HERO

Pee-wee football coaches and parents erupted into an all out brawl south of Texas last week, over two child players scuffling on the field. The quarrel climaxed with one team's coach sucker-punching an opposing parent in the back of the head.

One pre-teen player, Justin Robinson, told CBS News "I still can't believe the coaches actually did that in front of us, because that's a bad example for us."

For having more child rearing sense than the grown men entrusted with his well-being, and showing maturity beyond his years, Robinson is this weeks' American Hero.

On that note, we hope the SAC opener goes smoother than pee-wee football in Pearland, Texas.

PWNED of the Week

Senior Daniel Kreykes tried his luck paddling the Great Falls of the Potomac River outside of Washington, DC — instructing BC students how not to properly perform an S-Turn. We at The Clarion staff don't know much about kayaking, but the boat is probably supposed to be upright. We thank Kreykes for submitting his own picture for this issue's "PWNED of the Week."
