

Your Horoscope:

Aries (March 21-April 19): Getting hit by a car while wearing Wranglers is the only way you will ever leave behind Real American. Genes.

Dane Cook Question: Did Your Shoes Come Off?

Taurus (April 20-May20): Complaining about the state of affairs in our country, but doing nothing to enact change doesn't make you conservative or democratic - it makes you part of the problem.

You Should: Get Off Your Soapbox

Gemini (May 21-June 20): Using the phrase "hulk smash" to describe your sex-life will permanently bar you from having one.

Character Trait To Substitute: Hubris For Discretion

Cancer (June 21-July 22): An unfortunate misunderstanding will leave you permanently scarred in several ways when the "Get Strapped" convention you attend turns out to be the largest sado-masochist gathering on the east coast.

Lucky Hobby: Locksmithing

Leo (July 23-Aug. 22): Your attempts to unload some long-held personal baggage will backfire when the sign company hired by your therapist puts a space between the "e" and "r" in his title.

Lucky Drug Store Purchase: Kleenex

Virgo (Aug. 23 - Sept. 22): Your attempts to expose bias in journalism will result in a "green" revolution in the newspaper industry, when every publication starts printing its news on scented, two-ply Quilted Northern. The Clarion is going greenish-brown!

New Companions: Bearded Chin-Sack Gnomes

Delivered by your astrologically inclined Editor in Chief: John M. Climer

AMERICAN HERO

In a questionable move, the New Oxford American Dictionary recently named "refudiate," a combination of the words refute and repudiate in a Tweet by Sarah Palin, the best new word of the year.

We at The Clarion have several questions for the New Oxford American Dictionary Company, first and foremost of which is: did you underestimate the attempts George W. Bush made to add words to the English language?

So for "condmoting" (condoning/promoting) Sarah Palin's stupidity and adding a combination of two words that are synonymous to the English language, we salute you New Oxford American Dictionary.
