I am one down-to-earth, no-nonsense, SOUL SISTER.
I love my brown hair, my brown eyes, and my milk chocolate skin.
I love my broad nose, my full lips, and my big behind.
In all my gold and splendor, I could have been Cleopatra—and I sure don't look like Liz Taylor!
Every morning I awake to the smells of incense.
I bathe in sweet perfumes.
I put on my dashiki and I look in the mirror and smile.
I pat my afro, walk out the door, and I tell the whole world to KISS MY BLACK ASS!

A True Friend

Four hundred miles sure is a long way from home. August, 1987, I was a mere freshman here at Carolina and, according to my father, "green as a pool table and twice as square." It was pretty scary being all alone and independent. College was a new situation, with classes to go to and friends to make. The challenges were many, but I figured, "What the hey" and gave it my best shot.

One year and a half later, I can look back with pride, having made many friends and being quite happy here. However, there is one friend who stuck by me through all of my trying times. Perhaps I didn't act accordingly or say the right thing to someone, but He still has been there for me.

To Him, Jesus, I am thankful. For those who know Him, He still is the real thing. For those who don't, try Him.
