April Fool's Day '89

News Flashes

In the spirit of the April Fool's holiday, The Pilot staff has produced this issue for your amusement. None of the stories in the issue are true and any similarity between reality and the stories is truly unintended. With this thought in mind, enjoy the April Fool's Day edition of The Pilot.

Jennifer Richards, a 22-year old Gardner-Webb student was jailed when a court refused to accept her 9,000 pennies for a traffic fine. Miss Richards brought the coins in a bowling bag to pay for five tickets ranging from reckless driving to running down old women. She said she had been harassed by a policeman, who issued all five tickets. Judge T. Stone of the Greater Boiling Springs Metropolitan Traffic Court West found her guilty on every single charge. This is one time that Jennifer Richards' womanly wiles did not work... better luck next time "Jen".

Dr. Bill Stowe was arrested last week for streaking. It seems that Wild Bill was attempting to show a Rhetoric and Grammar class how the Proto-Indo-European tribe dressed and got a little carried away. Says one class member, "I don't know... I looked up and he was nude. The next thing I know, he's running through the ground floor of Lindsay."

Stowe was finally subdued in the Webb Building by Dr. Tony Eastman after a fifteen-minute chase through the ground floor of Lindsay and the Campus Center. Before he was captured, Stowe was joined in his folly by Pat Davis, Dennis Quinn, and Jim Taylor. "Far out. It brought back memories of the good ole' days..." Quinn commented.

Stowe was tried before his peers and found not guilty due to a lack of evidence. The decision infuriated Eastman, who protested the entire affair by burning back issues of The Pilot.

"I'll get him. How dare he interrupt my Eastmanism 102H class. He doesn't know what he's messing with." Undisclosed sources say Dr. Eastman has written Washington about the matter.

In Boiling Springs, North Carolina, police officer Deputy Dawg stopped GWC student John Jeffrey Schaefer for a loud muffler. The officer then discovered that Schaefer had no driver's license and no insurance. So Deputy Dawg was forced to impound the vehicle. "But my girlfriend's in the trunk," Schaefer wailed. It turned out that Schaefer and his girlfriend (Laura Hester) had disagreed over something and she had vacated the front seat... in favor of the trunk. Dawg released Hester after the situation was clarified. Schaefer was freed on a $300 bond for the driving offenses. No trial date has been set.

In what has been termed as a miracle, Dr. Chris White was spotted on campus yesterday. Webb Building sources say that White was not on campus, but instead this was a body double used in case of assassination attempts.

However, a Pilot reporter got close enough to hear the conversation between the alleged school President and a staff member. The tape, though a little rough in spots, went as follows:

White(?): "... maybe we ought to do 'Hound Dog' to start the set. I just don't feel like this crowd will like 'Jailhouse Rock'."

Staff member: "King baby, king baby. I realize that you haven't revealed yourself to the public in over ten years, but 'Jailhouse' will work, baby."

White(?): "Well Colonel if you think they'll go for it, I guess I'll try it. I need something though; can you get me some more jelly doughnuts?"

Dr. White (Presley?) was unavailable for comment. Webb Building sources say that he was on an extended vacation at Graceland, Tennessee (see picture).

The Gardner-Webb Concert Choir recently completed its standing-room-only tour of the world performing in such renown halls as Bill's Pickin' Parlor in West Boiling Springs, The Best Little Doghouse in Alabama, Yasser's Pleasure Dome in Beirut, and the Musik Mikhail Moscow. On one hall, the choir was asked
