play in the grass courtyard of Phase II of the Forum. Sculptors and artists from across North Carolina and the East Coast were invited to present their sculptures for the project. Ren Brown, the director of St. John's Museum of Art, Hannah Gage of WGNI-FM radio, and Drs. Kemille Moore and Tony Janson of the art and theatre department, judged the competition.

"The sculptures were evaluated on the basis of artistic merit, relationship to the site and project goals," said Tara Griffin of Erickson Public Relations. "It was also important for the artwork to be able to withstand environmental conditions, take into account public safety and not require much maintenance."

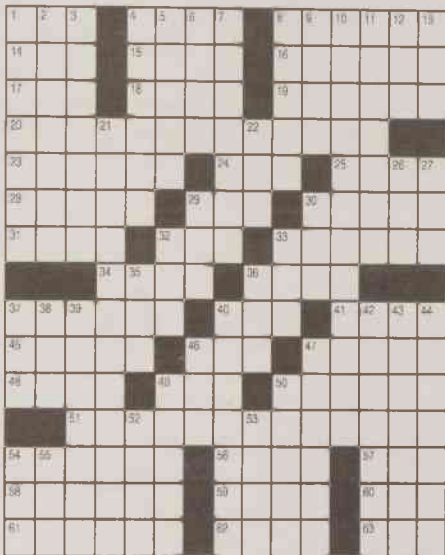

Once the sculpture has been unveiled, a number of speakers will comment on the importance of public art. Then a champagne toast will be offered in celebration of Suceyoshi's work. The boutiques and restaurants of The Forum will sponsor special promotions all evening, allowing guests to shop and enjoy the retail center. There will be several drawings during the evening for gift certificates. A raffle for a $1,000 Forum shopping spree is being held to benefit St. John's Museum of Art. Members of the art museum will receive special discounts for different vendors throughout the event.

Tickets for the Sculpture Soiree are $15 each and all of the proceeds benefit St. John's Museum of Art. The event should last until 9 p.m.

Earn Extra Money

How?

You can earn up to $140 per month for donating your life-saving blood plasma. Plasma is in critically low supply and lives depend on it.

Come to SERA-TEC and earn money while watching movies, or reading a few hours per week while you donate.

New donors receive a total of $90 for their first four consecutive donations.
