

Question of the Week:

How has the presidential election controversy affected your political beliefs?

Student Voices:

NIKKI RUSSOS,
sophomore

"It really hasn't affected my beliefs, but there are some things that don't need to be dragged out. It just proves there are flaws in the system."

JON BALL,
junior

"Even though our government is one of the best in the world, it goes to show that it isn't perfect. But my views haven't really changed."

LESTER TURNER,
sophomore

"The controversy has changed how I feel about the importance of voting. I used to think everyone's vote counted, but now it seems only a specific group's vote matters. I have mixed beliefs about our democratic government now."

JEFF LENARD,
junior

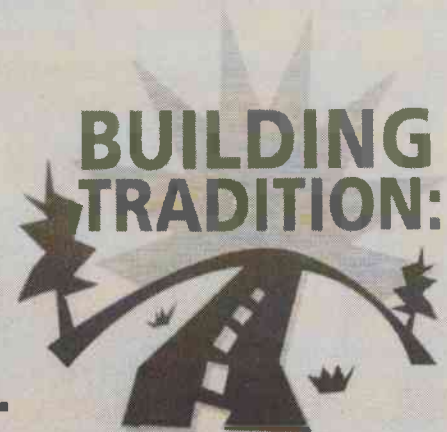

"The election is like a circus show and has given me a lack of confidence in our government. Al Gore said he'd stick with the choice of the people and now that is not in his favor, he's attesting it. I think it's ridiculous. We've made a laughingstock of our government and it's making the U.S. look bad."
