

Our Student Govt.

The Board of Trustees, through the faculty and administration has extended the opportunity to the students of St. Andrews to organize themselves into a student association for purposes of developing programs and procedures conducive to self-discipline. It is expected that each student will fully accept his individual role in the development of a personal interest and code of conduct which is essential in effective and enjoyable Student Government.

Many of the Student Government offices have already been filled and the remaining offices will soon be filled by campus-wide elections for Honor Council members. The individual classes will meet within the next two weeks to elect their officers and representatives to the Senate.

The general consensus of opinion is that St. Andrews should and will have one of the best and most active student government associations available to any student body. The following shows the divisions of the Student Government Association and gives the names of the officers who have already been elected.

The Associate Dean of Students, Miss Helen Wallace Mims, will serve as faculty liaison to the executive body of the Student Government Association known as the Student Council. The Dean of Students, Dr. Ralph G. Hester, will serve in an ex-officio capacity. The Student Council is composed of nine members. The four executive officers are: President, Annie Duke; Vice President, Mike Pegram; Secretary, Faye Hooks; and Treasurer, Carol Brooks. Also holding positions on the Council are the President of the Student Center Board, Larry Fowler; the President of the Honor Council, two dormitory presidents, and the President of the Day Student Association.

The legislative branch of the SGA is known as the Senate. Its membership includes approximately twenty-five students from various organizations on the campus. The known representatives to the Senate are the executive officers of SGA and the President of the Student Center Board, the Orientation Chairman, Wayne Farmer; the President of the Christian Association, Betty Ruth Barker; the President of the Athletic Association, the six dormitory Presidents, Dickie Knowles, Mary Neely, Patsy Garner, Elaine Batts, Bunk Spann, and Nancy Gray; the Editor of the yearbook, Magie Fishburne; the Editor of the newspaper, Elaine Ward; and the President of the Day-Student Association.

The Honor Council is the major judicial body of the SGA. Its composition includes the President of the Student Government Association, two other members of the Senior Class, two members of the Junior Class, one member of the Sophomore Class, and one non-voting faculty advisor. The five positions named will be filled by elections among the classes. The Council will hear all cases which are appealed from the Dormitory Council and all cases involving infractions of the Honor Code and General Regulations as stated in the College Handbook.

(Ed. note. This is written by members of the Rules Committee in an effort to explain to the student body why it is felt that the merit deduction system will provide fairer penalties than any other system.)

When we first began to think about a system by which Christian citizenship could be maintained in our college community, this question arose, "How can justice be provided for all on an equal basis?" Our primary objective was to integrate the positive points of other penalty systems in order to compile a just and flexible system that would fit the needs of this campus exclusively.

All of us we know are aware when there is a community of living, there must be rules by which the community maintains its rights to exist. Rules are not made to take away your freedoms but to guarantee that they shall be upheld.

We are certain that you will help us to uphold these standards and will contribute any ideas as to how we can improve our campus community.

Staff Procedure

by Harriett Otten

In a corner of this twice-a-month newspaper, one will see a list of names. Is it just a "list of names" or does one visualize a group of students hard at work? Indeed, they are hard at work gathering material, interviewing, listening, watching, punching typewriters, and pushing pencils. All this is attempted and accomplished in their "spare time."

The complete staff is divided into two sections, the Editorial Staff and the Business Staff. Basically, the duty of the Editorial Staff is to report and compile the news. The Business Staff has as its primary function the problem of raising the funds to meet the budget.

It is the duty of the Editor.

Chapel Speakers Laurinburg's Voice Of Education

by CHARLES QUICK

(Ed.s Note: This is the first in a series on interesting historical aspects of Laurinburg and its community. A better understanding of Laurinburg's past will help in creating a harmonious existence between college students at St. Andrews and the community residents.)

In 1879 a crippled young man came to Laurinburg looking for a place to teach school. His name was William Graham Quakenbush. His background was a story of birth into a poor family, orphaned at the age of 12, and crippled in an accident in his early youth.

But William was a born educator, and his brilliance was noticed by a neighborhood school teacher, a Miss Webb, and she played a major role in helping William obtain an education. First, William was tutored by Miss Webb herself, and then went on to study at a small academy at Four Oaks in Orange county. From there he went to study at Bingham school at Mebane. At his finish there, Colonel Bingham loaned William money for a year's study at the University of Virginia.

It was then that William, in 1879, came to Laurinburg to begin his career as a teacher and an educator. His first school was a large frame house on the Lumberton road. The school did not consist of grades as we know of them today, but there was definitely a division of high school study. When a student finished at the Quakenbush school, he was ready for college, teaching, or to go out into the world of business.

Mr. Quakenbush was a good educator but he was more. His former students say that he gave them in addition something not to be found in books, some transmission by precept and example of his own upright character and his ideals that they have carried with them through the years.

In the midst of his work and when he had come to the fullest realization of his power, he was stricken by paralysis in his 51st year. He tried to carry on for a time but found it impossible to do so, for another stroke followed and still another before his death at 54.

But in the course of his lifetime Mr. Quakenbush had built a school and a system of education that was to transform this corner of the state.

The monument which stands before the courthouse is a fitting memorial to the man and his work:

"Christian Scholar and Philanthropist,

For 21 years principal of Laurinburg High School His life was gentle, 'And the elements so mixt in him

That Nature might stand up and say to all the world. This was a Man.'

The dedication reads: "In recognition of his exalted character,

In appreciation of his ennobling influence upon youth,

Erected by a people grateful for his love and service."

When next you are in downtown Laurinburg, stop by the memorial and read the inscription there. It will be hard not to feel that we must try to enrich our lives and to try to live in a manner near to that of William Quakenbush.

Campus Driving

Courtesy reminders now are being placed on vehicles parked in congested areas soon to be identified as restricted, reserved, or no parking areas around the campus. Traffic directional signs are being erected and curbing is being painted to identify such areas.

Traffic into the Student Center Circle must keep to the right, with parking being permitted in the white lanes parallel to the right curb. Where curbing is painted yellow, parking is restricted to vehicles only when the driver remains in the car. Where curbing is painted red no parking at any time is permitted.

Service roads and service areas around the campus buildings are reserved for use of maintenance and other vehicles which serve the college. Students and faculty are not to use or block such roads and areas without written permission and a windshield tag from the Business Manager.
