St. Andrews Presbyterian College

Laurinburg, N. C., Thursday, Jan. 25, 1968

Vol. No. 6. No. 14.

FOWLER A. DUGGER JR., editor of The Alumnews, official publication of the Auburn Alumni Association, has resigned to accept the position as director of news and publications on Feb. 1.

Louis Lomax, Writer, Speaker, Discusses Race, Space, Nation

The American experience has begun to produce a distinct way of life; a theology and a philosophy that are unique. The strain one feels today, the sense of unease everybody senses and is talking about, is actually a painful awareness of the rootlessness we all have now as a result of the clash between the concept of absolute freedom which is central to the American experience and the concept of racial and religious separatism-bigotry, really-that was so much a part of this Republic's first days.

Dr. Louis Lomax, whose home is Valdosta, Georgia, will appear Monday, January 29 at 3:00 in room 105 of the gymnasium to address the students of St. Andrews and the public of the community. Dr. Lomax is an honored guest lecturer in the Christianity and Culture 400 program.

Louis E. Lomax is well known not only for his skilled writing and eloquence as a speaker, but also for his honesty, profound insight and genuine interest in meeting and talking with people.

An outstanding lecturer and television personality, he has served on Mike Wallace's news staff and has been a feature writer for the "Chicago American" and "Afro-American".

In addition to the Annisfield-Wolf Award, Lomax has been awarded three honorary doctorate for his work as a writer and a humanitarian.

He is the author of three highly regarded books: THE RELUCTANT AFRICAN: THE NEGRO REVOLT; WHEN THE WORD IS GIVEN, a study of the black Muslim movement. His latest publication by Random House is entitled, THAILAND: THE WAR THAT IS - THE WAR THAT WILL BE.

Dr. Lomax's thesis is, "I wish to probe. . ." One best sees our development in terms of the agony that has beset organized religion - Catholic, Protestant, and Jewish; and of course, one sees it clearly as the Negro demands "in" and the other ethnic group reply "we don't hate you; but why don't you go and develop your own sphere of economic and political power as we did."

Not only has our troubling shaken our religious and ethnic foundations, but has thrown our educational institutions into an uproar over the question of just what do we train people to do and be if they are to live meaningful lives in the kind of world that must be, if there is to be a world at all.

The topic of Dr. Lomax's lecture will be THE TRIPLE REVOLUTION: race, space, and the nation.

Lomax is proclaimed by Newsweek Magazine as one of the best social critics in America today.

Dugger Becomes Campus News Director

Fowler Dugger, Jr. will join the St. Andrews community as a member of the development staff on January 29, as director of news and publications. Mr. Dugger will be filling the position left vacant since last summer when Jack Abernathy resigned to join an advertising firm in Richmond, Virginia.

Born in Andalusia, Alabama, Dugger is a 1943 graduate of the University of Alabama. He received the Master's degree in political science at Duke University.

Bruce Frye, director of development, said of his new co-worker: "Mr. Dugger's long experience in journalism, coupled with his understanding of higher education, equips him well to interpret the program of St. Andrews to our many publics."

Formally with the Lee County Bulletin, a weekly newspaper in Auburn, Alabama, Dugger has for several years been editor of the Auburn Alumnews, a Publication devoted to the affairs of Auburn University Alumni. He has also been serving as assistant to the director of development at Auburn University. In earlier years he has had an interest in the poultry business.

Dugger is a ruling elder in the First Presbyterian church of Auburn. His wife is the former Vivian Gwaltney of Windson, Virginia, and they have four children. Their daughter Carol is a freshman here at St. Andrews and she lives in Concord Dormitory.

New Calendar Plan Affects Returning St. Andrews Students

When St. Andrews students return to the campus next September, they will be participants in one of the most major advances the college has made.

An entirely new calendar plan has been set up. It aims to improve the calendar so that students can do a better job academically. It will provide an opportunity for students to organize their time more wisely and produce a better effort.

The faculty committee recommended to adopt the 4-1-4 plan in April, 1967. Since then the Calendar Committee, composed of faculty members and students, have been at work devising the best possible arrangement. The well-planned program has been worked out for the most part with a few adjustments to be made.

St. Andrews will be one of the three colleges in the Southeastern United States under the new system. Wofford College in Spartanburg, S. C. began the 4-1-4 plan in 1967. Florida Presbyterian College is also under the new calendar. Austin College in Texas, Defiance College in Ohio, Gustavus Adolphus College in Minnesota and St. Olaf College also in Minnesota are now on the 4-1-4 plan.

St. Olaf College, which began their 4-1-4 plan in 1964, reports that the program "appears to have great promise for improving the total educational program. . ."

Beginning with the Fall term,

1968, St. Andrews will initiate the 4-1-4 calendar. Under this plan, students will take 4 semester courses during the Fall and Spring terms and will be able to concentrate in one field of interest taking a single course in the Winter term.

This "interim" term embraces four weeks, "affords opportunities for intensive crea-

LOGAN AND COLE PRESENT ART SONG LECTURE-RECITAL

The music department of Appalachian State University will present a lecture-recital on the "art song" tonight in the L.A.A. at 8:00 p.m. This program is the first in a series of exchange concerts between St. Andrews and Appalachian State. Mr. Dady Mehta will be giving a recital there on April 8, 1968.

The piano and voice recital will be conducted tonight at 8:00 p.m. in L.A.A. by Dr. Joseph C. Logan and Walton S. Cole of the ASU music department. They will discuss vocal and instrumental content, and show how they can be combined to form an "art song."

The program will begin with "Das Wandern" by Franz Schubert, who is considered the first composer of art songs. Also included in the program are the following selections: "Widmung" by Robert Schumann,

"Sonntag" by Johannes Brahms, "Zueignung" by Richard Strauss, "To the Children" by Sergei Rachmaninoff, "The Birds" by Benjamin Britten, "The Trumpeter" by J. Arlie Dix, "Barbara Allen" arranged by Augusta Holmes, and "Air Vif" by Francis Poulenc.

Dr. Logan received his B.F.A. and M.F.A. degrees from the University of Georgia, and his Ph. D. from Florida State University. This is his second year at Appalachian, where he teaches voice and music education in addition to directing the University Singers.

Cole has been at Appalachian since 1951. He attended Memphis College of Music, received his B.A. from Southwestern at Memphis and his Master of Music degree at the University of Arizona. He teaches piano and a survey course which is an introduction to music.

Walton Cole and Dr. Joseph Logan of the ASU music department will present a lecture-recital on the art song in the LAA tonight at 8:00 p.m.
