Campus mourns Troy Burton

by Suzyn Smith

On Tuesday, March 4, a memorial service for Troy Burton was held in the Belk Main Lounge. Burton, a junior, died of cerebral malaria on March 2. He had contracted the disease when he was home for winter break in Zimbabwe. Burton's family and more than 200 Students and faculty were in attendance to remember him on Tuesday night.

Religious Studies Professor Dr. Mel Bringle gave the invocation, which was followed by Dean of Students Marcia Nance reading a selection from Deepak Chopra. Noreen Hayden and Denis Hilton put together a video remembering Burton which included scenes of Burton whitewater rafting and the opening scene of "The Lion King."

Business Professor Bob Littleton was next to speak, discussing how Burton had been a challenge at first, but soon had become one of Littleton's best students. "He was my good example," Littleton said. Throughout the evening, Troy's metamorphosis into a responsible student came up again and again. "In seeing the change in Troy, I saw the reason that student life professionals do what they do," Associate Coordinator Stan Dura would later state.

Coach Mark Peeler spoke about Burton's three years as the manager of the men's bas-
