Zeta Honor Delois Shaw As 'Lady of the Year'

by Edna Harris

Miss Delois Shaw, a sophomore from Rocky Mount, was honored Sunday, Feb. 28 as "Lady of the Year" at Winston-Salem State College. She was 20 years old the day before she received her award.

The program climaxed Finer Womanhood Week sponsored by Zeta Phi Beta sorority on campus. Miss Vivienne Brown presented a plaque to Miss Shaw.

She won in a student election over Miss Rosa Williams of the senior class and Miss Novel Russell of the junior class.

A sophomore, Miss Shaw is the daughter and youngest of seven children of Mr. and Mrs. Charlie Shaw of Rocky Mount. She is an honor graduate of the Booker T. Washington High School of Rocky Mount.

She is an honor roll student at Winston-Salem State and a member of Alpha Kappa Alpha sorority and the English Literary Club. During the 1963-64 school year she was crowned Miss Alpha Sweetheart.

Her goal in life is to become an elementary school teacher and do advanced study in English. Her major is education, and her minor is English.

Miss Shaw is working her way through college. Last summer she worked at a summer resort in New York as a secretary and bookkeeper. She has been working every summer since she was in high school.

When she received her award, she said, "This is the most wonderful and greatest honor I have ever received. I never felt the student body thought so well of me. Their confidence in me has given me inspiration to do better in the future."

Men Organize Into Urbane Society

The Urbane Society was founded under the guidance of Dr. W. Archie Blount. The organization's objectives are to develop aspects of being a finer gentleman, Christian character, stimulate cultural and intellectual achievement. Members try to carry out the aims of the group.

To become a member of the group, a male student must be a junior or senior. He must be nominated by the membership committee, and he must get a two-third approval by the club.

The group is planning to take trips to cultural events.

Its motto is "Enter into refinement." The organization is dedicated to the memory of the late Herbert S. Clark, a former faculty member of this college.

The officers are president, Arthur Gray; vice-president, Oscar Carter; secretary, Samuel Couthen; treasurer, John Smith; historian, Clarence Campbell; and chaplain, Julian Williams. Other members are Kenneth Walker and Charles Carter.

JUST FOR FUN

Neighbor to a mother: What is your son taking up in college?
Mother: Space.

Girl: What three words are used constantly by all students?

Boy: I don't know.

Girl: You are right. (smile)

College Choir to Start Singing Tour April 15

by Frankie Smith

Tour time is coming around again for the Winston-Salem State College Choir. The choir is really going places this season. Beginning its tour April 15, the choir, along with Dr. J. Dillard, their director, will arrive in Washington, D. C. in time to rehearse and refresh before concert time.

The singers will give their first concert at the First Baptist Church on 1911 18th Street, S.E. Staying overnight in Washington, the choir will leave early the next morning for New Haven, Conn.

There they will be sponsored in concert by Charles Goodmyn at 1180 Mulboro Street.

On April 17, the choir will travel to New York City for a 2 p.m. rehearsal at the 5th Avenue Presbyterian Church. The rest of the afternoon and evening will be spent in leisure and making preparations for the following day.

Easter Sunday will be a very busy one for the choir. Starting at 6 a.m. it will perform at the Radio City Music Hall. The chorus will perform again at 11 a.m. in Brooklyn, at the Antioch Baptist Church on 828 Greene Avenue for morning services, with the Rev. George Lawrence in charge of services. They will leave there and go back to New York City where they will perform at the Lincoln Center in the Philharmonic Hall at 8:30 p.m.

Remaining in New York, the choir will, on Easter Monday morning from 7:30 to 10:00, cut tapes for The Great Choirs of America series for the five Sundays in May at the National Broadcasting System.

For the next four days (April 20-23) the singers will appear in concert in various cities in New Jersey. They will sing at the Calvary Baptist Church in Pat-

RELIGIOUS EMPHASIS WEEK IS OBSERVED ON THE CAMPUS

The Student Christian Association of Winston-Salem State College chose as this year's Religious Emphasis Week theme, "The Campus Quest: Who Am I? Where Do I Belong? What Do I Believe In?" The week included a vesper service with the Rev. Kelly O. P. Goodwin as speaker.

On Monday evening the guest speaker for the week, Dr. Henry C. Brooks, led the discussion on "The Campus Quest for Selfhood." Tuesday evening the topic for discussion was "The Campus Quest for Identity." Dr. Brooks was the speaker for the chapel program Wednesday. Thursday evening the topic was "The Campus Quest for Beliefs."

The religious emphasis on the campus symbolizes the intent of the college to recognize religion as a basic element to the human enterprise. These activities seek to further enhance, to deepen and to enrich the religious experience of each individual student.

In addition to the activities on campus, each student is encouraged to attend on Sunday the church of his choice in the city of Winston-Salem.

Those persons of the Sunday School responsibility for the success of the week of observance were:

VISITING SCHOLAR ADVISES REVISION OF HISTORY TEXTS

by Delois Shaw

Revision of history textbooks is a by-product of the civil rights movement, Dr. John Hope Franklin told 750 people at Fries Auditorium Tuesday, Feb. 16.

Franklin, a noted Negro historian and professor of history at the University of Chicago, spent an afternoon on campus as a visiting scholar under the Piedmont University Center. He also spoke at Wake Forest College and other area colleges during a three-day tour.

"The new role of Negro history is that of revision," Franklin said. "The history will allow for the correction of errors and inclusion of omissions by earlier historians. This will make possible the telling of the true history of the Negro which previous historians thought unimportant to include."

In his discussion of historians of American Negroes, he said that through the years the history of the Negro has been included or excluded to satisfy the trends of the times.

"Every people should make their own history," Franklin said. The history of the Negro has come into its own being, and all of it has not been written by Negroes, he said.

Franklin gave three ways of revising history texts to include Negro history — complete revision of textbooks, addition of a chapter on Negro history, or use of supplementary materials in the classroom.

The textbook industry, he said, is "most sensitive to the wills of influential people and groups. I call textbook publishing an industry rather than an intellectual enterprise," he said. "Authors must write a text that is not offensive to any group that matters."

He also warned against activities of pressure groups to force immediate revision of textbooks. "I am afraid of what can happen," he answered during a question and answer period.

The work of historians is not finished in the revision of history, Franklin said, but a good beginning has been made to make Negro history available to all.

Set Goals, Visiting Minister Advises Students

by Velma Lindsay

"The major problem with today's college students is that they have no sense of direction."

This was the thought expressed by Dr. Henry C. Brooks March 14-19, as he spoke on campus during Religious Emphasis Week.

"In life we confront many situations in which the needs are great, but the resources are small," Brooks said. "To live effectively we must face such situations."

"There are two ways by which we face situations — the way of least resistance often called the easy way out and the way of faith."

Brooks called on students to make the most of what they have to accomplish much in life.

"The college student of today must have an opportunity to raise questions," Brooks said. "He cannot accept those things which were told to him by others. He must accept ideas on the basis of his experiences. Young people should have more freedom to know for themselves."

The church has failed to challenge young people, he said. "If the church respects the integrity of the child," he said, "the child will not stray from the church when he grows into adulthood."

Brooks is assistant professor of psychology and clinical training at Andover Newton Theological Seminary in Mass.

A man is untrue to everyone, including himself, anytime he does not live up to the ideals in which he professes belief.
