SGA Candidates 1981

Fourteen students are vying for the executive cabinet positions of the Student Government Association. The positions are president, vice-president, director of financial affairs, director of secretarial affairs, director of social affairs, secretary of day student affairs, and director of judicial affairs.

On the next few pages will be descriptions of each candidate. The information was compiled by the following staff members: Von Corbett, Debra Foriest, Michael Hampton, Angela Jackson, and Janet Martin. Special thanks are given to Millard James and Winston Lassiter for their photography.

President

"I would basically like to be SGA president because it mingles with my major, political science. This office will not only give me practical experience, but also tone functional skills taught within my major," remarked Harold Nathan Burton. Harold, a junior, is a native of Asheville, N.C.

Born under the sign of Taurus, his hobbies are collecting albums, building model cars, and skiing.

Harold feels that he knows everything about the position ranging from the school constitution to the administrative guidelines, and in general, the basis of the university structure.

In high school, Harold was a member of the football team, the track team and advisor assistant to academic affairs. At WSSU, he played football for one year and served as Junior Class president. He has also chaired the Planning Placement Council and the International Council.

Harold considers himself to be a student activist. He feels he can do some positive things for the students with a position in the SGA. "I can stimulate student awareness, pertaining to not only the school's affairs, but also issues facing blacks abroad." He went on to say, "In dealing with these basic institutional affairs, I could enlighten students' perception of social problems, facing our black race. This ideology is not only encompassing blacks' needs, but using unification to establish an equilibrium between the races on and around our campus."

Qualities which Harold feels enable him for the position include: Knowledge assimilated through the social sciences, being a political science major, leadership, and ability to relate to all types of characters, personalities, races, ethnic groups and cultural standings.

Harold believes the SGA is not chiefly perceived as a social organization. He commented, "No it's not, because the office administers to a more extensive administration, than merely social activities."

"I will make an attempt for unification of the entire student body," concluded the candidate.

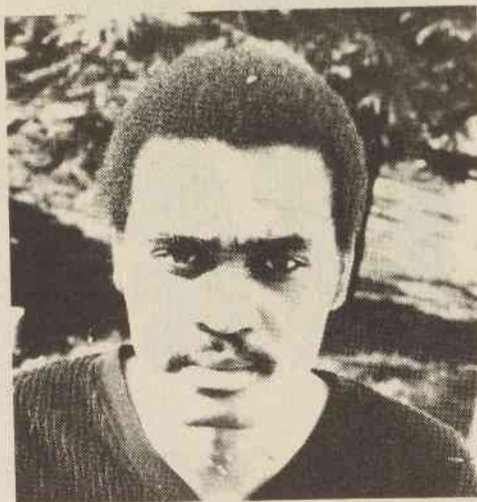

Joel Lawson, a junior political science major with a public administration tract, is seeking the position of president of the SGA. "I am running
