The new Student Government Association president for the 1989-90 school term is Wanda White, a rising senior from Concord, North Carolina.

Ms. White, who was a landslide victor in the race for the presidency, is excited about working with her new cabinet and getting the overall cooperation of the student body.

"I'm sure the cabinet will be cooperative and I'm looking forward to working with all of them," she stated.

"I felt some ideas for improvements here at WSSU would help decrease student apathy and bring the student body closer together," she said.

Ms. White, a member of the dean's list and high honors list and a member of Delta Sigma Theta Sorority, Inc., stated that a big problem on the campus was low morale in the students.

"My platform consisted of getting the student body more involved with activities happening on campus. I feel that with an open mind and an open heart, the student body will get more involved with the decisions made by the SGA," said the president-elect who assumes her position on June 1st.

As president, White will work with staff and faculty members to prepare for activities concerning the student body, to press certain issues and make certain changes for the betterment of the university.

It is a job that requires close attention by White and the aid of her cabinet to make those necessary changes work. She feels very confident that she can do a good job.

EuGenia Williamson, a rising senior from Reidsville, North Carolina, will reign as Miss Winston-Salem State University for 1989-90.

Ms. Williamson, a Mass Communications major, said the reality of her new position hasn't effected her yet because of all the excitement.

"With all of the campaigning finally over, it hasn't had a chance to hit me yet," said Ms. Williamson. "It should start to hit me next week sometime."

Ms. Williamson says she doesn't want students to look at her differently now that she's a queen. She still wants people to look to her for help as they've done so in the past.

"A queen should not only possess beauty, but also have intelligence," she stated.

"Due to the overall support of the student body and especially my family, I feel confident that I will represent Winston-Salem State University to the best of my ability," she further stated.

Many students have suggested that Miss WSSU's selection should be in the form of a pageant instead of voting. That way the talent of the queen-to-be would be exhibited on stage.

This year a forum format was used where the panel of contestants were subjected to various questions from students.

"The forum takes the place of the pageant and gives the contestants a chance to show their knowledge on campus, community, and national events," said Ms. Williamson.

"Plus, I think the decision should be placed in the hands of the student body as to who they want to represent them," she further stated.

Ms. Williamson begins her reign as queen in the Fall of 1989 and will succeed the present Miss WSSU, Ms. Veronica Howard.

Teila Hand, a rising junior with a double major in English and History, will serve as vice-president of WSSU's Student Government Association for the 1989-90 academic year.

When asked about working with the other new cabinet members she said, "We have a diverse group of people this year. Each year when you get people together with different ideas there is bound to be change. Change is good because it indicates progress."

Hand, who is a native of Charlotte, North Carolina, says that even though the vice-president has a relatively low profile, she plans to change all that by working closer to SGA President-Elect Wanda White and by promoting some ideas of her own that she would like put into action.

"I feel the students could be more involved on the campus. Personally, I would like to see the students more involved in community awareness projects," she stated.

Hand and White seem to show promise as future leaders. Hopefully they will boost the spirits of the student body and get a lot of things done to make WSSU continue its strive towards education excellence!

Rams Join U.S. Army Reserves Program

Many students, past and present, have joined forces with the U.S. Army Reserve, and according to them, it was a decision that wasn't all that difficult.

With the U.S. Army Reserve Program

each one is entitled to skill training (training done during the summer), GI Bill ($5,040 to help with education), Student Loan Forgiveness ($20,000 for loan repayment past or present or future loans), Cash Enlistment Bonus ($2,000 cash money for enlistment) and in just one enlistment a part-time income of over $20,000. All of this and the U.S. Army Reserve will not interfere with school or anything else they may get going in the future as they only work one weekend per month. They all saw the Reserves as a way to get solid, paid training for a career part-time, and a way to help take care of some of their education expenses, and possible Commissions later.

SFC Mark B. Hamblett, US Army Reserve Recruiter, was responsible for detailing the Reserve Program for each enlistee.

SFC Hamblett noted that each enlistee had different ideas in mind when look-
