

Chowan College Following A Time-Honored Tradition

MURFREESBORO — Chowan College is following in the time-honored tradition of smaller, church-related colleges where one finds such advantages as a real sense of "belonging" to the college family, instruction based on Christian presuppositions, economy in tuition and boarding expenses, and definite interest in the individual on the part of the faculty.

Chowan is the second largest two-year college related to the Southern Baptist Convention, the second oldest (established in 1848) of North Carolina's seven Baptist colleges, and the second largest two-year college in North Carolina.

This co-educational institution has been the scene of unprecedented progress in growth and services as an institution of Christian higher education but the trustees and administration are determined that quality rather than quantity shall always be the primary consideration. They realize that the smaller, well-equipped and accredited two-year college is able to offer a quality and type of education which the larger institution can never provide for youth who are standing at the doorway of their higher education experience.

Chowan College, therefore, exists for the student, propagates with unyielding tenacity its avowed purposes, and operates within a framework of responsibility to achieve academic excellence while shouldering the responsibility of maintaining Christian commitment through its entire program.

DIRECTIONS FOR THE DIRECTOR are given by Ross A. Cadle, left, who recently retired as director of admissions after 12 years at Chowan, to E. Frank Stephenson Jr., Chowan's new director of admissions.

Purposes Of Chowan College

Chowan College officials summarize the purposes of the college in four statements as follows:

1. To provide quality higher education which is grounded in Christian truth, and to help the individual student to gain a truly Christian philosophy of life.

2. To enlist as members of its faculty and staff only those persons who are scholastically proficient, morally excellent, and who are genuine lovers of youth and its strong potential.

3. To give thorough training in the standard disciplines to those students who wish to continue their education in other higher educational institutions, and to those students who are seeking vocational education and excellent trade instruction on the backdrop of a liberal arts education.

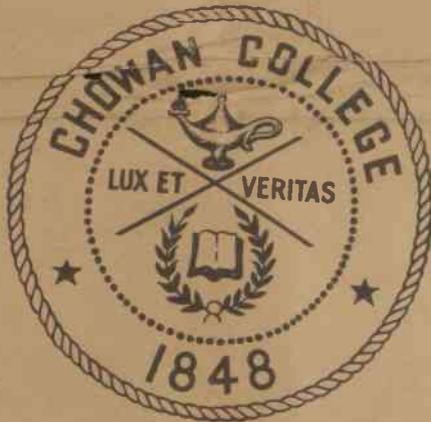

4. To train and develop Christian leaders—both lay and professional—who will serve well their churches, their communities, and their world.

CORPUS CHRISTI, TEXAS, may be home to Pam Heishman, popular Chowan College sophomore, but she is an outstanding cheerleader.

SHARON TYLER MAY BE small-sized, but her spirit and enthusiasm are big contributions to Chowan's cheerleaders.

CONGRATULATIONS TO CHOWAN COLLEGE STUDENTS and FACULTY UPON THEIR 118th ANNIVERSARY

We're both builders for the present and the future. Chowan College's record of building Christian character, broad educational background and service to mankind—is a parallel to our endeavor to provide the finest buildings for commercial and industrial uses.
