

Experienced Newspaper Executive Takes Graphic Arts School Helm

MURFREESBORO — A newspaper executive with 20 years experience as editor and publisher in the Carolinas, Virginia, Tennessee and Florida, Malcolm Jones has become director of the famed Chowan College School of Graphic Arts.

He served as general manager of the Elkin Tribune just prior to becoming the second director in the history of the School of Graphic Arts and also serves as a director of the North Carolina Press Association.

A veteran of World War II service with the U.S. Navy, he is a graduate of the Navy School of Photography at Pensacola, Fla., and of the University of Missouri School of Journalism. He is also a business and accounting graduate of Central Business College, Kansas City, Mo., and has won numerous awards for typography, advertising and photography.

Previous experience includes more than eight years as advertising director for the Oak Ridge, Tenn., Oak Ridger; four years as editor, general manager and part owner of the Mebane Enterprise; assistant publisher and associate editor of the Galax Gazette, Galax, Va.; advertising director for the Town News of Pompano Beach, Fla.; display advertising staff member, the Sentinel-Star, Orlando, Fla.

He is successor to John McSweeney, whose retirement this summer ended the career of the man instrumental in establishing the nationally famed School of Graphic Arts and guiding it to recognition as one of the world's outstanding institutions preparing people for challenging careers as editors, publishers, printers and teachers of newspaper mechanical production.

DIRECTOR AT WORK — Malcolm Jones, who recently became the second director in the history of the famed Chowan College School of Graphic Arts, is seen inspecting operation of one of the school's tape-fed Elektron linotype machines.

MAINTAINING STUDENT RECORDS — Much systematic planning, time and effort is needed to maintain records of accomplishments of as large a number of students as are enrolled at Chowan and secretaries maintaining these records include Mrs. Alice Vann, left, and Mrs. Sue Rose.

Baptists In Education Book Printed, Published

MURFREESBORO — A new book printed and published by the Chowan College School of Graphic Arts, "Southern Baptists in Christian Education," was released this summer during business sessions of the Association of Southern Baptist Colleges and Schools.

Its author, Dr. H. I. Hester of Liberty, Mo., has also written numerous definitive volumes of Biblical studies and is among pioneers in work of the Association of Southern Baptist Colleges and Schools, serving as its secretary-treasurer for 20 years.

Presiding during sessions at Furman University when the book was released was Dr. Bruce E. Whitaker, president of Chowan College who is also president of the association, an organization of 72 member institutions located from the east coast to California.

Previous publications of the School of Graphic Arts include "A History of Chowan College," a 330-page volume co-authored by former college chaplain Edgar V. McKnight of Greenville, S. C., and the Rev. Oscar Creech of Ahsokle.
