

Robert Stewart, left of Woodland, and David French of Highland Springs, Va. take a quick look at a student's IRS return between classes on Chowan College's campus. The two business and accounting majors received practical experience for a future accounting partnership as they helped Chowan students complete their income tax returns as a free service.

Two accounting majors offered free income tax service

MURFREESBORO — While they are not yet a threat to H & R Block, two Chowan College accounting majors made an impact on Chowan's campus with a free income tax service offered in the spring.

Robert Wilson Stewart of Woodland and David E. French of Highland Springs, Va. helped students file their returns as an extension of their Income Tax Accounting 243 class under Professor L.M. Wallace.

The two business students helped some 15 Chowan students with free services before the April 15 filing deadline.

They said none of the students they helped ended up paying any taxes on their limited income from summer and either campus or off-campus employment. But they had to file in order to receive a refund and Rob and Dave said they were happy to be of assistance to Chowan students.

And although it did not make them any richer, it gave them needed experience and bolstered their decision to become Certified Public Accounts (CPA's) and form a future partnership.

First, Rob and Dave say they must continue their education at senior colleges and gain additional experience before establishing an accounting partnership in the Hampton Roads area. They must also complete their requirements for the CPA.

Stewart, a graduate of Socastee High School in Myrtle Beach, S.C., plans to attend the University of North Carolina at Charlotte in the fall to pursue an accounting degree.

French, a graduate of Highland Springs High School, will seek employment with a Richmond-area CPA firm and continue his education in night school at Virginia Commonwealth University. Both graduated from Chowan in May.
