

Reputation, tradition continuing at Chowan

MURFREESBORO — As Chowan begins its first year of service since returning to four-year status, the college continues to earn the respect and reputation academically as an outstanding liberal arts college.

Founded in 1848, Chowan is the second oldest of North Carolina's seven Baptist colleges.

The campus landmark is the historic McDowell Columns, constructed in 1851, but most of the facilities are of modern design. Sixteen contemporary buildings provide housing and classrooms for about 1,000 students.

The campus sports and recreation center is the Helms Physical Education Center, which houses basketball and racquetball courts, two gymnasiums, an Olympic-sized swimming pool, and seating for 3,000 spectators.

Horner Graphic Communications Center, one of the newest structures on campus, houses a large amount of modern equipment and a number of laboratories for teaching printing technology.

The Texie Camp Marks Computer Center, housed in McSweeney Hall, has more than 50

Getting ready for classes

The Trading Post Bookstore is one of the busiest places on the College campus during the first few weeks following the opening of school when students shop for the required textbooks and other school supplies.

The Trading Post offers a full line of items needed for college life and is also the college "bank" where students may cash personal checks.
