Merging traffic

By GARY WHITLEY
Merging traffic is not a noisy rush hour of all the workers being let loose on the city, it is a story of the people in the city. The setting is Washington D. C. and the time is about an hour before lunch.

A new office building has just been completed in a residential section. It will be occupied by an Insurance Company with 400 employees. Right now they are discussing the public law problem of moving the company out of the residential section to a business section.

As the company stands they hold a five year lease on the building and they find that it is illegal to stay. The company officers are trying to go to court to certify the warranty on the building so they can stay.

The company has run against a problem, the people who live next door are complaining that they are making too much noise while moving in. In fact they have gone so far as to call the police and complain about the racket.

The family who live in this house go by the name Johnston. Mr. and Mrs. Johnston have three children; one is in college, and the other two are Jim, 11 years old, and Linda, 14 years old. They have lived in that house for eight years now.

The construction of the office building started last winter and they managed to live through that. Now with the building completed, the company started moving in yesterday. Mr. Johnston had built his house but he failed to provide himself with a driveway, so he has been parking on the street. The office building has indoor parking but it accommodates only one hundred cars, leaving two hundred employees to park their cars on the street. This morning Mr. Johnston had to park his car three blocks from his home.

It is lunch time now and the Johnstons are eating. As they are discussing the parking problem they hear a crowd outside. Jim and Linda run to the door to see what is happening. The Insurance Company has just been relieved for lunch, and they are proceeding to their cars in search of a place to eat. It seems that since this is a residential area the nearest place to eat is about two miles away. All of a sudden Mr. Johnston sees his chance. He gets up from the table and dashes through the living room and out the door almost running Jim and Linda down. He is running down the block to his car. When he gets there he drives up and parks in front of his house.

Jim and Linda still stunned, quickly move out of the way while Dad marches into the house. This went on day after day until Mr. Johnston sees a car taking up two parking spaces in front of his house. He gets so mad he writes a note in windshield wipers. The ticket reads as follows: "Thanks for Taking up Two Parking Spaces. I had to park two blocks out of my way, you Selfish Idiotic Moron."

The very same day he went into the office of the Insurance Company to complain. Realizing his problem they built him a private driveway which took about two weeks. Meanwhile he only delivered about half as many parking tickets as he did before.

After the driveway was installed Mr. Johnston went so far as to smile every now and then. Everything was fine until the summer days came, because the Insurance Company installed a big central air conditioning unit, then every time the unit came on the lights in Mr. Johnston house dimmed. This happened because the air conditioning unit was using up most of the electricity in a square block area.

Finally today was the day Mr. Johnston had been waiting for. It was the day the court decided whether or not the company would have to move. If the company could not stay the building would become an apartment building for tenants to live in. Also it would cancel the five year lease that the Insurance Company signed.

At the court Mr. Johnston and the residents of the neighborhood won and the Insurance Company moved. The building was now rented to tenants, and Mr. Johnston and his family were happy at least until the air-conditioning turned on.

Quality point ratio - freshmen and sophomores

By B. FRANKLIN LOWE, JR.
Chowan College is an academic community. As such it is constantly striving to improve the quality of education. This is, of course, an absolute necessity in view of man's rapidly expanding body of knowledge. The college is determined that when a student is graduated from this institution he will be as well prepared as any student who has completed two years of study at any other institution in this country.

The above statistics reflect the fact that many of our students do have as their primary goal the attainment of a solid, critical educational foundation. These statistics also reflect the fact that a high percentage of our students have not yet reached the level of maturity where they are able to discern between that which is of real lasting value and that which is of transient value.

At the beginning of this academic year every freshman student was told that if he expected to succeed in college he must be willing to spend a minimum of two hours in preparation for each hour he spent in class. This advice still holds good. The Grade Point Averages (GPA) listed below would indicate that more sophomores have accepted the validity of this advice than have freshmen.

Movie spokesmen unhappy with proposed new tax

NEW YORK (AP) — Motion picture industry spokesmen are critical of a bill introduced in the North Carolina Legislature designed to "take action against the declining moral quality of motion pictures" through taxation.

The measure would provide for a progressive tax on movies according to whether they are for adults or for younger people as well.

The bill was introduced by State Sen. Geraldine Nielson, a Republican from Winston-Salem.

"It's a ridiculous notion," said Mort Sunshine, executive director of the Independent Theater Owners of New York. "In effect she is putting a tax on maturity. This kind of thing would be punitive toward pictures which could open new frontiers."

Taylor Mills, director of public relations for Motion Picture Associates, said the organization's legal department was aware of the bill and had asked for a copy.

Under the bill, movies rated by the Motion Picture Association of America as "X," to which persons 16 are not admitted, would be taxed 50 percent.

A 25-cent tax would be applied to 'R' movies, which persons under 16 can attend only if they are accompanied by a parent or guardian.

"M" movies, for mature audiences, would have a 15-cent tax. General audience, or "G" movies, and any undesignated films released before Nov. 1, 1968, would carry a 5-cent tax.

Sunshine argued that the ratings concern the ages of potential viewers, not the morality of the motion pictures. "It's ridiculous and perfectly unconstitutional," said Joseph Alterman, executive director of the National Association of Theater Owners. "It's silly. There is no question of morality involved, just a guide to parents, to have some indication as to whether it's suitable for kids."
