Chowan Matmen Fourth in Regionals

By JANE BRIDGFORTH

Chowan's wrestling team returned from the Mid-Atlantic Regional Wrestling Tournament in high spirits. Six wrestlers placed in the tournament which was held in Rockville, Md.

Chowan students have reason to be proud of their wrestling team. The Braves came in fourth place out of 25 colleges. The Braves scored 56 1/4 points (12 1/4 more than in 1978), but dropped to fourth place in the Mid-Atlantic District behind Middlesex, N. J. (72 1/4); Keystone, Pa. (69 1/4); and Bergen, N. J. (57 1/2).

Chowan was in third place until the final match of the tournament when Bergen's heavyweight pinned his opponent while losing.

To add to the excitement of the final match of the tournament, Roger Randall was selected the "Most Outstanding Wrestler" in the Mid-Atlantic Region.

The six wrestlers which placed in the tournament are Charles McCook (118 lbs.), who placed 3rd; Doug Saunders (134 lbs.), 3rd; Roger Randall (150 lbs.), 1st place; Joe Morgan (158 lbs.), 3rd place; Mike Neilands (177 lbs.) 3rd place; and Steve Miltsakakis (190 lbs.), 2nd place.

Six (Wo)man Basketball Up for Decision by HEW

WASHINGTON, D.C. (CPS) — Taking its role as higher education's referee somewhat literally, the U.S. Department of Health, Education and Welfare (HEW) will have to decide if six-player basketball is discriminatory toward women, and will have to make its decision sometime before the end of the year.

Complaints have been filed from all five states where six-player basketball is the officially sanctioned version of the game for women. The complaints allege that the game is discriminatory because only the three forwards on each team can shoot. This, the complaints say, prevents women who play guard from having as great a chance for athletic scholarships.

If HEW agrees, federal funding to schools employing six-player basketball rules could be jeopardized.

The defenders of the six-player game say that, as a result of the three-forward, three guard positioning, more women get a chance to play. It's also said the six-player version is faster and thus more interesting to watch. In Iowa, for example, the women's state tournament regularly draws more fans than the men's tourney.

Bike-A-Thon or Walk-A-Thon
