

To the Editor:

How many times have you wanted to spend some time with a friend of the opposite sex, maybe to study or to sit around and talk?

If you are like most of the Chowan students, this is a frequent thought, but there's no where to go and be alone.

We have visitation in dorms two nights a week from 8 to 11, but that's only 6 hours a week. We also have the library where you can study together, but you can't have any fun if you're not supposed to talk any louder than a whisper. Then you have your lounges in the dorms where it is mostly congested with students going in and out. In many of the dorm lounges there are not enough seats for everyone and the noise is outrageous.

If you decide you want to sit outside after dark, for example, on the grass or sidewalk behind Mixon, security will tell you to leave. I'd like to know where that rule is stated in the college handbook. There's just no place for friends of the opposite sex. The only place left is the student center and most of the time that's just as loud as the lounges.

What can be done to solve this problem? Why can't there be longer visitation hours, maybe from 5 to 11 or maybe even an extra visitation a week? Why can't we have the right to walk or sit outside the dorms after dark without being bothered and interrogated by security? These are just some of the questions dealing with visiting someone of the opposite sex. I'm not trying to put down the college by writing this article but I'm expressing some of the feelings I've heard from many students. The college wants us to act like adults and act responsible. I believe we could handle the responsibilities that some of the changes would offer.

Sincerely,
Robert Prince

Friends

The true meaning of a friend is one whose boundaries knows no end one who stays up with you through the night
one who can always make you feel just right one who you talk to all night long one who can do very little wrong one who is always in your heart cause that's where friendship has to start one who can somehow get you to try one who is wild but can also cry one who is the best friend she can be one who is just like Linda is to me.
