

Last year, Jennifer Hyatt, as shown with business professor Elaine Casmus, made this classroom display. Now the Chowan College graduate is applying her knowledge and skills as Hess's department store manager.

Associate degree opens door for former student

Jennifer Hyatt is building a career on the merchandise management degree she received from Chowan College in May of this year.

Hyatt is department manager for coats and dresses at Hess's department store in Greenbrier Mall in Chesapeake, Va. She returned recently to Chowan to speak to merchandise management students at the invitation of Professor Elaine Casmus, who heads the program sponsored by the Department of Business.

Hyatt said her classroom instruction and hands-on experiences in Chowan's merchandise management program prepared her for her various duties as a department manager. She supervises the work of three co-workers with a fourth to be added soon. She is responsible for counting in and displaying the clothes in the floor. Her area includes Misses and Mrs. coats and dresses, Petit World, Women's World, and Maternity.

The 1989 Chowan graduate said her associate's degree opened the door to "the best job I ever had."

She said she draws help daily from the management class she took under Casmus. "The class emphasized being positive in dealing with those you supervise. I find this approach to be very helpful."

She said Hess's gives its employees an opportunity for rapid advancement.

She said she is pleased that Hess's promotes from within. She has applied for the company's Retail Academy in Allentown, Pa., Hess's headquarters.

The former Chowan cheerleader said the academy prepares employees for positions as buyer and merchandise coordinator. She said this can lead to positions as assistant store manager and merchandise manager, and eventually to store manager. She explained the academy lasts from two to six months depending on the company's evaluation of the student's progress.

The recent Chowan graduate said a 1988 merchandise management graduate, Tammy Manteo, is manager of the lingerie department at Hess's of Tower Mall, Portsmouth, Va.

Chowan College pays tribute to ratification of Constitution

By Karen Uberti

The administration, faculty and students will congregate on November 16, 1989, to commemorate the 200th anniversary of the ratification of the United States Constitution. The ratification occurred on November 21, 1789, by a vote of a six-day state convention. The activities on Ratification Day are sponsored by student development at Chowan. Clayton Lewis, Dean of Students, is the organizer of this event.

Part one of the ceremonies will be the dedication of the Ratification

Walk. This walkway is the brick walk from Daniel Hall to Parker Hall. The first dedication will begin at 4:30, and will feature music, the presentation and dedication, and the burial of the time capsule near the Susan Parker Kerr Gazebo.

Part two of the ratification program will consist of the ratification buffet. This will occur between 5:00 p.m. and 6:30 p.m. There will be a commemorative meal in which certain sophomores and faculty members will be hosts and hostesses.

The final part of the commemoration ceremonies will begin at 6:30 p.m. at Susan Parker Kerr Gazebo. This portion of the day's program will feature music, a speaker, and prayer.

On Ratification Day, all dormitories, clubs, and organizations will contribute something to be put in the time capsule. In the year 2089, the capsule will be dug up and opened so the students of that year can reflect on what the year 1989 must have been like. Some sort of stone marker will be constructed to give details about Ratification Day and the contents of the buried time capsule. The stone will be placed above the buried capsule.

Day Students—Who are they?

By DeeDee Babb

No one seems to know just who the day students are or what they do. They are a group of about sixty-nine students who commute from Murfreesboro, Ahoskie, Conway, Rich Square, Garysburg, Roanoke Rapids, and other communities in the area.

Each year a freshman day student receives a Day Student Scholarship. The scholarship money is raised by the day students themselves.

One way they raise money is at home football and basketball games. Various day students bake cakes or cookies. They then sell twenty-five cent chances on them at the games. At halftime a name is drawn and they get the goody. For many boarding students who win, this is a real treat.

Another way the day students raised money last year was by selling raffle tickets for a dinner for two at the College Inn Restaurant. The tickets were one dollar apiece and helped raise a lot of money. Altogether, the day students raised over $200 for the scholarship.

So, the next time you are at a home football or basketball game, support the day students. Spend the quarter you may spend on a video game to get a chance at a winning a cake.

Income tax information made available to students

Scholarships and fellowships might be taxable on your income tax return. Since August 1986, part or all of each might be taxed as income. See Publication 520, "Scholarships and Fellowships" for further details.

Working students will be provided a Form W-4, "Employee's Withholding Allowance Certificate" by the employer. When completing the Form W-4, remember that if you can be claimed as a dependent on another person's tax return, you generally cannot be exempt from income tax withholdings. To learn more, read the instructions on the Form W-4.

Students who had no tax liability for 1989 and who expect to owe no tax withholding during 1990 may qualify to be exempt from income tax withholding during 1990. To get it right, read the instructions on the Form W-4, "Employee's Withholding Allowance Certificate."

Students should receive a Form W-2, "Wage and Tax" from each employer for whom the student worked during 1989. All Forms W-2 should be attached to the income tax return before mailing. If you worked a job and did not receive a Form W-2, contact the employer and request a duplicate.

Students who qualify to be claimed as a dependent on another person's tax return may not claim a personal exemption on his/her own tax return.

Students who qualify to be claimed as a dependent on another person's tax return generally must file a return if their gross income exceeds their allowable standard deduction or if the student has unearned income along with earned income which totals $500 or more.

When filing your own tax return, you will speed processing and your tax refund by: entering the social security number correctly, checking mathematical calculations, dating and signing the return, attaching W-2(s), and using peel off label and bar coded envelopes, if you receive one.

Students may dial 1-800-424-1040 toll-free for additional tax information or 1-800-424-3676 to request free publications.
