

small TALK

Methodist College Newspaper

www.smalltalkmc.com

Fayetteville, NC

Established 1961

Volume 44, Issue 1

Get connected on campus

Student Clubs and Organizations has something for everyone

LAURA PHILLIPS
Staff Writer

Have a desire to broaden your interests and take a step outside the classroom? If so, get connected with Methodist College's student clubs and organizations. At Methodist College there are over 60 clubs and organizations that students can take advantage of.

There's special interest clubs such as Novelties and The Lector where students embrace literature and the arts. For the adventurous risk taker, the Outdoor Adventure club may be for you. This organization goes on hiking, kayaking and white water rafting trips. Students in search of spiritual growth can attend organizations sponsored by campus ministries such as FCA, and Deeper Life Ministries. There is a chapel service on Wednesdays at 11 a.m. and a contemporary service on Thursday nights at 7:17.

Guided by an advisor, clubs are open to all students who wish to join Honary clubs such as Beta Beta Beta and Delta Mu Delta are offered for those students who have high academic achievement and who are in the high percentile of their class. These clubs allow the students to further their academic success and further their leadership skills.

If the academic challenge of certain clubs, is not your thing it's possible to still have fun. Here at Methodist College, students have the freedom of organizing their own club or organization. So if there have ever been thoughts of starting a magazine, pool league or book club, go for it! Student run clubs such as the Libertarian club and Methodist College's first paintball team have already been approved

Photos by Lindsey Tederman

Above: Fellowship of Christian Athletes (FCA) meets. FCA is one of the most popular clubs on campus. Left: The women of Zeta Pi Alpha pose at the entrance sign. Methodist has two sororities with Zeta Pi Alpha being the youngest of two.

Keep in mind, as with most things in life, there are a few standards that need to be met in order to start a club. Each club or organization formed with advisor must have at least 10 members and a written constitution that is compatible with the college mission.

The school does not fund student clubs and organizations but the school does allow students to publicize events and use campus facilities. If students wish to form their own club they should contact the Vice President for Development and Services or check out the college website for phone number listings.

So there is most definitely something for everyone to get involved in and connected to on campus, just look for it. In exchange, there are opportunities meet new friends with similar interests while furthering your academic growth and leadership skills.

Methodist welcomes new additions

REMILLE SHIPMAN
Staff Writer

The opening of a brand new school year at Methodist College means the beginning of many new things, new students, new experiences and new relationships. This new school year will also bring a host of new staff members.

Student Activities Director Charles Amerson, Assistant Director of the Center Of Entrepreneurship John Arnold, Director of Public Safety Steve Bryant, Director of Career Services Deborah Vasquez, and Office Manager of Student Development & Services Lois Devico will all be looking forward to serving the entire Methodist College community in their various positions.

Student Activities & Student Activities Council director Charles Amerson is responsible for a number of things concerning our students, including providing all of the quality student services, entertainment, developing campus traditions, and providing the cultural, social, recreational, and educational programs that pro-

cont. on page 5 See NEW STAFF