NORTH CAROLINA WESLEYAN

Vol. I, No. 2

STUDENTS TO ELECT COUNCIL

On February 2, the faculty of North Carolina Wesleyan College will nominate eight students to serve on the Community Council. These students will be examined for scholastic rating, a 2.0 average is required, and for character rating.

The names will be held until February 9, when they will be announced at assembly. At this assembly the students will nominate four faculty members. The campaign will begin at this time.

On February 16, the election of the students will be held to select four from the eight. The faculty will choose two from those chosen by the students, and the staff will select one, comprising a Community Council of 4 students, 2 faculty members, and one staff member.

GATEWOOD WRITES

Dr. Willard B. Gatewood, Professor of History, has received good reviews on his book, Eugene Clyde Brooks, Educator and Public Servant, which was published by the Duke University press December 31.

It is a biography of a man who was prominent in political and educational circles in North Carolina. Among other things Eugene Brooks was President of N.C. State College and State Superintendent of Public Instruction.

GROUP APPOINTED

A special committee to study the organization of the Student Government Association at Wesleyan was appointed by SGA President Henry Sanders. Those appointed to the committee are David Caison, Freddie Jones, Joan Lamberth, and Dicky Moore.

The purpose of this committee is to study student government organizations, student constitutions, the Community Council, and qualifications for holding office in student affairs. It will make trips to other colleges to study the forms of government in these colleges.

This committee will advise the president concerning student government matters at present. When the committee has made a thorough study, it will make a proposal to the student body for the permanent organization of the Student Government.

The special committee is working with Vann Massey, SGA vice-president, and its work will end when it has completed its study and made the proposal.

DECALS COMING

Next week Wesleyan College students will be able to purchase decals, key-chains, pennants, and stationery, decorated with the college seal and name. Soon they should be able to buy sweat shirts and jackets among other things.
