Faculty Approves Soph Proficiency Exam In English

The faculty has approved the sophomore proficiency examination in English, to be composed of a test in spelling and written expression. The spelling test will be made of 100 words, and will be selected from a standard word list of 3,000-4,000 words available in advance to the students taking the examinations.

The expression test will be administered by the English Department and the students will be asked to write a composition on a subject in a given length of time.

Our current student body will take this examination in the second semester of the sophomore year. Sophomores failing the test will be required to repeat the examination each semester.

This year's freshmen who fail the test must repeat it or take for credit an extra year of English composition. It is being recommended that the sophomores of the year 1963-64 and those thereafter must pass this test as a requirement for graduation.
